Cambridge Studies in Medieval Life and Thought, Third Series Volume 3

The Church and the Two Nations in Medieval Ireland

J. A. WATT

Dr Watt examines the way in which the English government dealt with Irish ecclesiastical matters from the time of the conquest of Ireland in 1171 up to the mid-fourteenth century. He shows how an attempt was made to 'colonize' Ireland by ecclesiastical means, and traces the changing fates and fortunes of the 'two nations' in their relations with one another.

Ireland's English Question

PATRICK O'FARRELL

This important re-interpretation of Anglo-Irish history covers the period 1534 to the present day, and seeks to explain why successive British Governments have failed to solve the Irish question.

£3.50

'For the quarter-century or so from 1890 onwards Professor O'Farrell has given us a study of altogether outstanding originality and quality which will compel a reassessment in every book dealing with the period.'

Irish Independent

'... refreshingly different—so different that it should be required reading for any historian aspiring to write the story of this country.'

The Irish Press

'This book (as its inverted title suggests) succeeds in throwing new light on an old problem.'
