Balkan as Metaphor

Between Globalization and Fragmentation

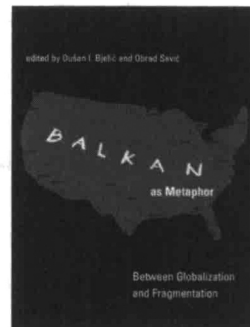

edited by Dušan I. Bjelić and Obrad Savić

This book explores the idea of Balkan as metaphor and the meaning of Balkan identity in the context of contemporary culture. Focusing on Balkanism both as a body of knowledge and as the critical study of that discourse, this book does for the Balkans what Edward Said's Orientalism did for "the Orient."

"Rich and varied in its exploration of Balkan identity . . . and challenges the reader to think in new ways about the region."

Vital New Study on Dostoevsky

DOSTOEVSKY AND THE DYNAMICS OF RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE

By Malcolm Jones

"This book moves the study of Dostoevsky's religious worldview into the twenty-first century, and will be of value to the scholar and the non-specialist alike."

—Sarah Hudspith, University of Leeds

"A book that should not be overlooked by any serious student of Dostoevsky."

—William J. Leatherbarrow,
University of Sheffield

"[O]ffers a highly distinctive holistic approach which reconciles disparate readings, and confirms Malcolm Jones's pre-eminent position within Dostoevsky's studies today."

—Sarah Young, University of Toronto

Dostoevsky and the Dynamics of Religious Experience

Malcolm Jones

This important addition to Dostoevsky studies explores the religious dimension of the novelist's life and fiction. Written by one of the foremost scholars on Dostoevsky and a founding member and former president of the International Dostoevsky Society, the book takes a fresh approach to Dostoevsky's representation of religion in his fictional world, which allows for both mystery and fear. A balanced and authoritative argument, this work is a major contribution to the study of Dostoevsky and Russian literature.

Imaging Russia 2000: Film and Facts

New Academia Publishing, 2004

348 p., bibliography, filmography, index

$29.00 hardcover; $24 paperback.

“Lawton’s excellent book is both a pathbreaking survey of Russian cinema since the fall of the Soviet Union and a lively firsthand account of the faltering first steps of the newly democratic capitalist state. Lawton summarizes the dislocations and uncertainties unleashed by the unstable market economy and the onslaught of foreign, primarily U.S., movies on a national film industry with deep roots in the Russian/Soviet past. . . . An excellent basic bibliography and serviceable illustrations make this readable journalistic assessment an ideal introduction not only to Russian film but also to Russia and its people today. Summing Up: Essential. All collections, all levels.” - S. Liebman, CUNY.

The Once and Future Budapest

Robert Nemes

"A good book that analyzes how a small multinational pair of towns on either side of the Danube became a united, and large, prosperous capital of Hungary."—Peter Fritzsche, author of Stranded in the Present

- Exploring the complex process by which Budapest became a Hungarian city, Nemes offers an inclusive picture of nation-building and urban development. He analyzes expressions of nationalism in all aspects of culture, from daily life recorded in memoirs and newspapers to politics, architecture, the arts, and theater. 259 pp., illus. 0-87580-337-7 $38.00 cloth

Russia in a Box

Art and Identity in an Age of Revolution

Andrew L. Jenks

"An impressive piece of research ... fascinating and illuminating."—Richard S. Wortman, Columbia University

- Tracing the history of Palekh from 1814 to 1991, Jenks shows how this rural Russian village, known originally for its production of religious icons and later for its exquisitely decorated black lacquer boxes, played a unique role in the emergence of nationalism—and how that role changed under the Soviet regime. Color images of some of the finest examples of black lacquers complement the text. 275 pp., 27 illus. 0-87580-339-3 $38.00 cloth

Tales of Old Odessa

Crime and Civility in a City of Thieves

Roshanna P. Sylvester

"This intriguing book is written in sprightly prose ... and argued cogently."

—Patricia Herlihy, Brown University

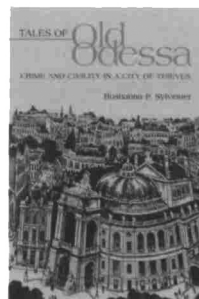

- Sylvester uses stories from the popular press to bring old Odessa to life and to analyze broader issues—relationships between self and society, anxieties provoked by urbanization, uses of public spaces, and the contest for social dominance in a multicultural environment. She sheds new light on the inner life of this vibrant city in the years before World War I. 254 pp., illus. 0-87580-346-6 $38.00 cloth

From Assimilation to Antisemitism

The "Jewish Question" in Poland, 1850–1914

Theodore R. Weeks

- Weeks examines how the ideal of assimilation of Jews in Poland was gradually replaced by more exclusionary and aggressive ideologies, culminating by the early 20th century in widespread Polish antisemitism. He argues that several long-term factors—economic change, political and cultural repression, the general intensification of national consciousness at the time, and the Revolution of 1905—played a part in the deterioration of Polish-Jewish relations. 255 pp. January 0-87580-352-0 $40.00
