

Jahrbuch für Geschichte von Staat, Wirtschaft und Gesellschaft Lateinamerikas

founded by Richard Konetzke (†) and Hermann Kellenbenz

edited by Günter Kahle, Hermann Kellenbenz, Horst Pietschmann and Hans Pohl

The Jahrbuch, founded in 1964, was the first journal published after World War II outside Spain and Portugal dedicated to the political, economical, and social history of Latin America. Specialists from Germany, from Western Europe, from North and Latin America as well as from the eastern bloc have contributed to the yearbook. Articles are written in Spanish, Portuguese, English, French, and German, and the journal has thus encouraged a fruitful academic exchange between scholars from different parts of the world.

The Jahrbuch is supplemented by a serial of scholarly monographs:

THE STORYTELLER

Mario Vargas Llosa

Inspired by a revelatory expedition into Amazonia, Vargas Llosa creates a spellbinding tale of a man who leaves the modern world to become the voice and chronicler of the primeval Machiguenga Indian culture. Norman Lewis

Reporting from areas in Central and South America and Indochina, Lewis reveals how Christian missionary groups, many backed with U.S. dollars and government support, are perpetuating the destruction of native cultures through their practices—from the stripping of forests and theft of land to the wholesale enslavement of populations. “Lewis is one of the best writers, not of any particular decade, but of our century.”—Graham Greene.

The Heritage of the Conquistadors

Ruling Classes in Central America from Conquest to the Sandinistas

By Samuel Z. Stone

Foreword by Richard E. Greenleaf

Rich in implications for U.S. foreign policy, The Heritage of the Conquistadors provides the historical and socioeconomic context necessary for an understanding of the problems facing Central America. Samuel Z. Stone demonstrates that the regimes of Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Guatemala, Honduras, and El Salvador are rooted in a common ancestry that often confuses the outside world's understanding of events such as the Salvadoran insurgency, the fall of Somoza, and the rise of the Sandinistas. Stone also considers how the divisions of ruling classes, effacing kinship and common social background, have led to the bloody power struggles of recent years.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

The Journal of Latin American Studies is published three times a year, in February, May and October. Its editorial offices are located in the Institute of Latin American Studies, University of London. The editorial board includes representatives of the Centres or Institutes of Latin American Studies in the Universities of Cambridge, Essex, Glasgow, Liverpool, London and Oxford.

The scope of the Journal is the study of Latin America from the standpoint of the social sciences (including history and international relations). Articles on literature and the arts are not normally included, but the editors are pleased to consider contributions in the field of intellectual and cultural history. Articles with an inter-disciplinary approach are particularly welcome.

Contributions are invited from all parts of the world. Articles should generally not be more than 8000 words long. Two copies typed with double spacing should be submitted. A style sheet is available from the editors. The Journal is published in English, but articles may also be submitted in Spanish or Portuguese; if the article is accepted, translation into English will be the responsibility of the author. Tables, diagrams and maps may be included by arrangement with the editors. The Journal only publishes original contributions; translations of articles already published will not be accepted. Each contributor will receive, free of charge, 25 offprints of the article and a copy of the issue of the Journal in which it appears.

The Journal publishes book reviews in each issue. Not all books received can be reviewed and editorial policy gives preference to substantial reviews of books regarded as of major importance for the disciplines covered by the Journal.

All contributions and editorial correspondence should be addressed to Journal of Latin American Studies, Institute of Latin American Studies, 31 Tavistock Square, London, WC1H 9HA.
