

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

SHAHNA ARPS is a doctoral student in anthropology at The Ohio State University. Her main research interests include maternal and child health and fertility and reproductive ecology. In 2004, she was awarded a Wenner-Gren Foundation for Anthropological Research Inc., Individual Research Grant to fund fieldwork in Honduras.

JOHN A. BOOTH (PhD University of Texas at Austin, 1975) is Regents Professor of Political Science at the University of North Texas, specializing in comparative politics, political violence, democratization, and public opinion. He is author of The End and the Beginning: The Nicaraguan Revolution, (Westview Press, 1982) Costa Rica: Quest for Democracy (Westview Press, 1998), co-author (with Thomas W. Walker) of Understanding Central America (Westview Press), and co-editor of Political Participation in Latin America (Vols. I and II), Elections and Democracy in Central America, (Holmes and Meier) and Elections and Democracy in Central America Revisited (University of North Carolina Press). He is an Associate Editor of International Studies Quarterly and on the editorial boards of Latin American Politics and Society and Political Research Quarterly.

DAVID CAREY JR. is an Assistant Professor of History and Women's Studies at the University of Southern Maine. His publications include Our Elders Teach Us: Maya-Kaqchikel Historical Perspectives. Xkib'ij kan qate' qatata' (University of Alabama Press, 2001), Ojer taq tzijob'äl kichin ri Kaqchikela' Winaqi' (A History of the Kaqchikel People) (Q'anilsa Ediciones, 2004), and Engendering Mayan History: Mayan Women as Agents and Conduits of the Past, 1870–1970 (Routledge Press, forthcoming).

JACK CHILD is Professor of Spanish and Latin American Studies at American University, Washington, D.C. He began working with the stamps of Latin America while growing up in Argentina, and now uses digitized versions of them to illustrate his lectures, teaching, and writings on Latin America, including the book Antarctica and South American Geopolitics: Frozen Lebensraum (Praeger, 1988). He has visited the South American Quadrant of Antarctica and the Falklands/Malvinas Islands eleven times as a lecturer and guide on board tourist cruise ships.

EILEEN DIAZ McCONNELL is Assistant Professor of Sociology and Latina/Latino Studies at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Her research focuses on the experience of Hispanic immigrants in the United States, particularly the Midwest. Her work has been published in outlets including Population Research and Policy Review and Cityscape: A Journal of Policy Development and Research.

TIM H. GINDLING is Associate Professor of Economics at the University of Maryland Baltimore County. His published research has examined of the relationship between economic development, labor markets, poverty and income inequality in Latin America and East Asia. His current research includes a study of the causes of changing income inequality in Central America.

JONATHAN HISKEY is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of California, Riverside. His primary interests concern the intersection of political, economic, and human development processes taking place around the world, with a focus on how the local political environment affects development. He has published articles on local development issues in journals such as Comparative Politics, Latin American Politics and Society and Studies in Comparative International Development, and he is currently a contributing editor for the Handbook of Latin American Studies.

JOEL HOROWITZ is Professor of history at St. Bonaventure University. He has published extensively on the political and social history of Argentina in the years between 1916 and 1946. His 1990 work Argentine Unions, the State and the Rise of Perón, 1903–1945 (Berkeley: Institute for International Studies, University of California, Berkeley, 1990) is currently being published in translation by the press of the Universidad de Tres de Febrero, Argentina.

JANISE HURTIG (Center for Research on Women and Gender, University of Illinois at Chicago) does ethnographic and participatory research on gender, literacy, schooling, the state and social change in Venezuela and in Chicago's Latino communities. She is coeditor of Gender's Place: Feminist Anthropologies of Latin America (Palgrave 2002). Her book Coming of Age in Times of Crisis: Youth, Schooling and Patriarchy in a Venezuelan Town is forthcoming (Palgrave).

ANDRÉS MALAMUD is Assistant Researcher at the Center for Research and Studies in Sociology (CIES-ISCTE) in Lisbon, and Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Buenos Aires (on leave). He received his PhD from the European University Institute in Florence. His areas of research include regional integration, political institutions, and party politics in Latin America. He is currently completing a manuscript on the influence of domestic institutions upon regional integration. Center for Research and Studies in Sociology (CIES-ISCTE, Lisbon) and University of Buenos Aires. Address: Rua Mateus Vicente 7, 9o Dto; 1500-445, Lisbon, Portugal. Tel: +351-21-727-0471. Email: andres.malamud@iscte.pt.

SHANNAN M. MATTIACE is Assistant Professor of Political Science at Allegheny College in Pennsylvania. She has recently finished two books on Indian politics in Mexico: To See With Two Eyes: Peasant Activism and Indian Autonomy in Chiapas (University of New Mexico Press, 2003) and Mayan Lives, Mayan Utopias, the Indigenous Peoples of Chiapas and the Zapatista Rebellion (co-edited with Jan Rus and Aida Hernandez Castillo, Rowman and Littlefield, 2003).

KENDRA MCSWEENEY is Assistant Professor of Geography at The Ohio State University. Her work on the microeconomic and microdemographic foundations of resource use by indigenous peoples has most recently appeared in the Annals of the Association of American Geographers, Society and Natural Resources, and the Professional Geographer.

ROSARIO MONTOYA (PhD anthropology and history, University of Michigan) writes on popular religion, class, gender and sexuality, and nation-state formation in Nicaragua. She is coeditor of Gender's Place: Feminist Anthropologies of Latin America (Palgrave, 2002) and is completing a book entitled Ambiguous Revolutionaries: Exemplarity and Contradiction in a Sandinista Model Village, Nicaragua, 1979–1999. Dr. Montoya is a community researcher and activist in Denver, Colorado and faculty affiliate at the University of Colorado, Boulder.

CAROLINE SHAW is Assistant Archivist at The Rothschild Archive, having previously set up the Charles Booth Online Archive and been editorial manager of the International Bibliography of the Social Sciences based at the London School of Economics. Publications include annotated bibliographies of both Cape Verde and São Tomé and Príncipe. She is a Visiting Research Associate of the Department of Portuguese and Brazilian Studies at King's College, London.

PETER M. SIAVELIS is Associate Professor of Political Science Wake Forest University. He is the author of The President and Congress in Post-authoritarian Chile: Institutional Constraints to Democratic Consolidation (Penn State Press, 2000), and numerous journal articles and book chapters on Chilean electoral and legislative politics. His current research focuses on political recruitment and candidate selection in Latin America.

CATHERINE M. TUCKER is Assistant Professor of Anthropology and Mesoamerica Research Coordinator at the Center for the Study of Institutions, Population and Environmental Change (CIPEC) at Indiana University in Bloomington. Her research interests include collective action, community organization and institutions, social and environmental dimensions of land cover change, and the political ecology of traditional and indigenous peoples in Latin America. She has published in Human Ecology, Society and Natural Resources, Mountain Research and Development, Landscape Ecology and Mesoamérica, among others.

MICHAEL A. UZENDOSKI is Assistant Professor of Anthropology at Florida State University. He has worked with Amazonian Quichua speakers of Napo, Ecuador for over ten years. His work on indigenous social theory has appeared in Ethnohistory and Millennial Ecuador: Critical Essays on Cultural Transformations and Social Dynamics (Norman E. Whitten, Jr., ed., University of Iowa Press, 2003). His forthcoming book, The Flow of Life: Value, Kinship, and Personhood among the Napo Runa of Amazonian Ecuador is being published by the University of Illinois Press.

LEAH K. VANWEY is Assistant Professor of Sociology, Research Associate at the Anthropological Center for Training and Research on Global Environmental Change, and faculty fellow at the Center for the Study of Institutions, Population and Environmental Change, at Indiana University—Bloomington. Her research focuses on household demography and land use, and has appeared in European Journal of Population and American Sociological Review.

ERRATA

In vol. 39, no. 3, John T. Morris was incorrectly cited as co-author of John Tuman's Reshaping the North American Automobile Industry (Continuum, 2003). Morris was co-editor, with John Tuman, of Transforming the Latin American Automobile Industry (ME Sharpe, 1998).