

ment of Public Administration, School of Business and Public Administration, Howard University, Washington, D.C. 20059; School of Public and Environmental Affairs, Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana 47401; Center for Governmental Studies, Northern Illinois University, DeKalb, Illinois 60115; Graduate School of Public Affairs, State University of New York at Albany, Albany, New York 12222.

Department of Public Administration, Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, Syracuse University, Syracuse, New York 13210; School of Public Affairs, Texas Southern University, Houston, Texas 77004; Graduate School of Public Affairs, University of Colorado, Boulder, Colorado 80302; Master of Public Administration Program, Department of Political Science, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, North Carolina 27514; Graduate School of Public and International Affairs, University of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 15213; and School of Public Administration, University of Southern California, Los Angeles, California 90007.

Written requests should be sent to the attention of the NASPAA Minority Fellows Program at the above addresses. In addition, a national program brochure may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope (4½ x 9½") to the NASPAA Minority Fellows Program, Suite 300, 1225 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. Individuals are urged to contact universities as soon as possible due to university admission deadlines for the fall 1975 academic term.

Announcement of Awards

---

ACLS Award

Benjamin Schwartz, professor of government, Harvard University, has been awarded an American Council of Learned Societies advanced research grant in Chinese civilization for his work on a general history of Chinese thought.

---

NATO Postdoctoral Fellowship

The National Science Foundation and the U.S. Department of State have announced 50 NATO Postdoctoral Fellowships in Science including one political scientist, Barbara B. Stallings, of Stanford University. Dr. Stallings will take her fellowship at the Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes, Paris, France.

---

Science Faculty Fellowship

The National Science Foundation has announced that two political scientists are among 93 Faculty Fellowships in Science awards. They are Ray A. Geigle of California State College, Bakersfield and Charles L. Taylor of Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University. The purpose of the awards is to help faculty members at colleges and universities broaden their perspective in the applications of science to societal problems.

---

ACLS-SSRC Awards

Seven political scientists have won awards in two joint American Council of Learned Societies-Social Science Research Council programs. The winners are:

South Asia Research Awards

Dennis G. Dalton, Associate Professor of Political Science, Barnard College: Ghandi's experience in South Africa, 1905-1914.

Robert N. Kearney, Professor of Political Science, Syracuse University: Youth and generational cleavages in the politics of Sri Lanka.

Martin Landau, Professor of Political Science, University of California, Berkeley: Bureaucratic politics and development strategies in Nepal.

Soviet Studies Program

Erik P. Hoffmann, Associate Professor of Political Science, State University of New York, Albany: "The scientific-technological revolutions" and the Soviet political system.

Rensselaer W. Lee, III, No academic affiliation, Ph.D. in Political Science and History, Bethesda, Maryland: "Social" control of technical innovation in the USSR.

Linda L. Lubrano, Associate Professor at the School of International Service, The American University: Professional relationships and policy involvement of Soviet scientists.

Paul J. Marantz, Assistant Professor of Political Science, University of British Columbia, Canada: The Soviet Union and the Western world, a study in doctrinal change, 1917-1974.

---

White House Fellows Program

W. Scott Thompson, Associate Professor of International Politics, the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, has been named as one of the 14 1975-76 White House Fellows. Two political scientists, Herbert J. Storing, University of Chicago, and David B. Truman, Mount Holyoke College, have been named members of the 11-member Commission for the Program.

---

Institute of Latin American Studies Program NEH Grant

The National Endowment for the Humanities has offered support of up to $68,449 to the Institute of Latin American Studies for conducting a program designed to expand instruction in Latin American Studies in schools, libraries and communities throughout Texas. Beginning in September, 1975, and extending through August, 1976, ILAS will conduct two conferences and a summer school designed primarily for educators interested in implementing or improving the teaching of Latin American Studies. This effort will be coordinated with the statewide program of bilingual-bicultural education. The first conference will be aimed at educators at the supervisory and administrative level; the second conference, for librarians, community leaders, and junior colleges; and the summer school will be organized for teachers involved in Texas' bilingual-bicultural effort. Each conference will consist of intensive seminars and information sessions pertaining to Latin American Studies.

The year-long program hopes to accomplish four goals: First, the training of persons engaged in or preparing to engage in Latin American Studies in community schools and libraries throughout Texas; second, the collection and development of appropriate instructional and curriculum materials and other information related to Latin American Culture Studies; third dissemination and "institutionalization" of this material through a publication and by training one or more "Latin American Studies and Area Specialists" to serve as resource people and consultants for other teachers in each Texas school district interested in Latin American Studies. Finally, it is hoped to establish, on the basis of this effort, a permanent "Resource Center Network" that will continue to carry out the goals of the program even after funding from the National Endowment for the Humanities has ended.

There will be financial aids in the form of travel and per diem expenses available to program participants and ILAS encourages individuals interested in knowing more about the program to write the project director: Dr. Edward Glab, Jr., Institute of Latin American Studies, Sid Richardson Hall, Unit I, University of Texas, Austin, Austin, Texas 78712.

---

Grant Support from the National Science Foundation

---

In addition to the awards listed in the Winter 1975 issue of PS, the National Science Foundation's Political Science Program has made the grants listed below from FY 75 funds.

The Program is now making recommendations for awards in anticipation of FY 76 funds. Normally four to six months lead time is required in the processing of formal proposals. Thus, the following schedule is suggested:

Proposals should arrive in (or before):

for funds needed in:

August
December
March

January-February
June-July
September-October

Research

Howard L. Rosenthal, Carnegie-Mellon University. Quasi-Collectively Rational Choice.

Charles R. Plott, and Morris Fiorina, California Institute of Technology. Experimental Examination of Group Decision Processes. (Joint Funding: Economics Program)

Alexander L. George, Stanford University; and Ole R. Holsti, Duke University. Collaborative Research on Foreign Policy Decision Making.

Carl P. Hensler, and David Sears, UCLA. Determinants of Household Consumption of Energy under Mandatory and Voluntary Conservation Programs. (Funding: Energy Increment)

Jerry B. Jenkins, University of Georgia. Interdependencies in Global Politics (Supplement).

Gerhard Loewenberg, University of Iowa. Models of Comparative Regime Support.

J. David Singer, University of Michigan. Correlates of International War (Supplement).

W. Phillips Shively, University of Minnesota. The Development of Aggregate Levels of Partisanship.

Richard G. Niemi, University of Rochester. Political Stability and Change.

Jack H. Nagel, University of Pennsylvania. Theory of Relative Evaluation.

Norman H. Nie, University of Chicago. Collaborative Research on Political Participation (Supplement).

John Sprague, Washington University, St. Louis; and Adam Przeworski, University of Chicago. Collaborative Research on Industrialization and Comparative Party Strategies.

Conference

Anthony Fisher, University of Maryland. Conference on the Political Economy of Depletable Resources (Funding: Energy Increment).

International Travel

Andrew T. Cowart, University of Iowa. Travel to attend annual meeting, European Consortium for Political Research, London.

Ted R. Gurr, Northwestern University. Travel to attend annual conference, British Political Studies Association, Oxford.

William J. Hanna, CUNY. Travel to attend 22nd World Congress of the International Union of Local Authorities, Tehran.

Dissertation Support

S. Verba/C. J. Uhlaner, Harvard University. Political Participation in Canada: The Relationship Between Ethnic/Linguistic Identity and Political Activity.

H. Hirsch/B. C. Buzan, University of Texas. Institutional Completeness and American Third Parties.