Anxiety Prevention & Early Intervention

FRIENDS
Anxiety Prevention Program

Anxiety disorders are the most common mental health problem facing children today. If left untreated, childhood anxiety may lead to severe adolescent and adult depression.

It is therefore crucial that mental health professionals are able to help children and their families develop effective preventative strategies to deal with anxiety and stress in early life.

FRIENDS for children aged 7–11 does just that.

Developed in Australia through extensive research and validation over the past eight years, the program is appropriate for use in primary schools and community health centres, as well as hospitals and private clinic settings. It is based on a firm theoretical model which addresses cognitive, physiological, and behavioural processes that are seen to interact in the development, maintenance and experience of anxiety.

Sample Pack

A sample pack of all materials is available for $76.

(includes manual, children's workbook, parent's booklet).

Copyright

It is the policy of the Australian Psychological Society to own the copyright to its publications, and to the contributions contained therein, in order to protect the interests of the Society and its authors, and at the same time to facilitate the appropriate reuse of this material by others.

Therefore, upon acceptance of their manuscript for publication by the Society, authors will be sent a copyright transfer form to fill out and return to the Editor. Publication of the manuscript will be contingent upon receipt of the completed copyright transfer form.

Publications of the Society are distributed to various other publications for review and abstracting purposes. In addition, the Society has contractual agreements with various secondary publishers for the republication, in hard copy, microfilm, or digital form, of individual articles and journal issues as a whole.

It is the Society's position that the abstracts that are published with its journal articles are indicative of and not a substitute for, the work as a whole; therefore, access services are allowed free use of these abstracts without securing the permission of the Society.

Enquiries about policy and procedures relating to permission to reproduce material published in the journal should be directed to the Australian Psychological Society.
