Chinese Writing

by Qiu Xigui

translated by Gilbert L. Mattos and Jerry Norman

Chinese Writing is a translation of Professor Qiu Xigui's renowned Wenzixue gaiyao 文字學概要, based on the revised edition published in 1994 in Taipei by the Wanjuanlou Tushu Co. Ltd. Recognized as the most authoritative work of its type, Chinese Writing discusses in detail the nature, composition, history, and evolution of Chinese script, drawing upon a wide variety of original source materials from Shang oracle bones to slips of paper from Dunhuang. By providing a comprehensive basis for the analysis of Chinese script, Chinese Writing represents an outstanding contribution not only to the field of Chinese grammatology but to grammatology as a whole. The usefulness of Professor Qiu's original work has been enhanced by the addition of new indexes of characters discussed and topics, as well as a classified bibliography of all sources cited in the text.

The Guodian Laozi:

Proceedings of the International Conference, Dartmouth College, May 1998

Sarah Allan and Crispin Williams, eds.

The Guodian Laozi: Proceedings of the International Conference is the first major publication in English on the bamboo slips excavated from a late fourth century B.C. Chu-state tomb at Guodian 郭店, Hubei, in 1993. The slip-texts include both Daoist and Confucian works, many previously unknown. The monograph is a full account of the first international conference held on these texts, at which leading scholars from China, the United States, Europe, and Japan analyzed the Laozi 老子 materials and the previously unknown Taiyi sheng shui 太一生水.

The first section of the monograph contains nine individually authored essays, covering such topics as the archaeological background; the conservation, ordering, and transcription of the bamboo slips; and the relationship between the Guodian Laozi materials and the received text. The second section is a full account of the conference discussion, with detailed treatment of the Guodian Laozi materials from the perspective of textual analysis and philosophical issues. The third section is an annotated edition of the Guodian Laozi materials and Taiyi sheng shui. The fourth section provides supplementary materials, including a critical summary of Chinese scholarship in the year after the conference with complete bibliography.

The Guodian Laozi: Proceedings of the International Conference is essential reading for scholars and students in the fields of Chinese thought, philology, archaeology, and history. It includes the most accessible edition yet published of the actual text of the Guodian Laozi materials and Taiyi sheng shui. It is, furthermore, a readable introduction to this topic for anyone interested in this very significant discovery.

Journal of East Asian Archaeology

Available online in 2001!

Edited by Lothar von Falkenhausen, Robert E. Murowchick,
Cheng-hwa Tsang and Robin D.S. Yates

On the appearance of its first volume in 1999, the Journal of East Asian Archaeology (JEA) has received a warm welcome by the scholarly community. The enormous amount of new data resulting from recent excavations taking place throughout East Asia, including China, Korea, Japan and their neighbouring countries, promise to considerably reshape our image of East Asian history. Backed by a broad international body of leading scholars from a wide variety of disciplines, JEA is the principal medium for these groundbreaking new insights.

The Journal of East Asian Archaeology includes reports on archaeological finds, contributions to archaeological synthesis, the history of archaeological research in East Asia, epigraphic and historical studies, and scholarship regarding the scientific analysis of archaeologically-excavated objects. Also comparative issues will be brought to the fore.

BIRDTRACK PRESS specializes in setting sinological type, integrating East Asian and alphabetic characters. We routinely set the unusual characters sinologists require, including custom logographs for variant or archaic forms. We offer a wide selection of alphabetic typefaces, and can create matching diacritics and phonetic symbols. We know how to meet publishers' page specifications, and are happy to discuss technical issues with design and production staff. We also work directly with authors, and can take a book through the production process, from manuscript to bound volume.
