

Three beautiful things

The stance of the woman holding the calabash of grain. The turn of her wrist as she flicks the grain into the air. The light gold smoke of the dust of the chaff floating beside her and so quickly away.

(Rural Africa, late C20)

Memento mori

The feeling of death, beginning to die. You re-enter your mother's womb.
You see. On to the beginning of the human race, the Creation, on out of time. And the next time it will be real. Good journey.

Michael Kelly