

Sheltered Housing for the Elderly

Policy, Practice and the Consumer

Alan Butler, Christine Oldman and John Greve,
University of Leeds

The Leeds study, on which this book is based, is the most comprehensive and detailed to have been conducted into sheltered housing, and it has evoked widespread interest both in Britain and abroad. The aim of Sheltered Housing is to answer some of the important questions about growth and proliferation, to evaluate sheltered housing from different points of view – including those of tenants – and to consider the scope for future development.

The Making of Community Work

David N. Thomas, National Institute for Social Work

As the first major review of community work since its rediscovery in the 1960s, this authoritative and comprehensive study will prove essential reading to all those involved in the field, or wishing to understand its influence on other professions. The author presents his ideas clearly, and his ability to look critically at some of the basic assumptions in community work ensures that his book will be an important source of ideas and inspiration in the years ahead.

Mental Health Social Work Observed

Mike Fisher, Clive Newton and Eric Sainsbury,
University of Sheffield

For some time there has been a felt lack of basic information about the practice of mental health social work, despite extensive changes in the organisation of social and psychiatric services under new mental health legislations. In this lucid and sympathetic new book the authors look at both long-term work and emergency work, taking into account the views of social workers, psychiatrists, family practitioners and of the clients themselves, to gain as full a picture as possible. Their study culminates in a recommended code of practice.

Social Work in Context

A comparative study of three social service teams

JIM BLACK, RIC BOWL, DOUGLAS BURNS,
CHAS CRITCHER, GORDON GRANT, DICK STOCKFORD

This is the first major study of the operation of social services departments since the large-scale reorganization of social work in the early seventies. The authors present both practitioners' and users' views of the service provided, and of the ability of social workers to respond to local needs. They conclude that area teams could be more flexible and responsive to the communities they serve by assuming a more catalytic, and less reactive role.
