Contributors

Christopher Mark teaches at the School of Music, University of Melbourne, Australia.

Luminita Aluas was born in Romania, where from 1978 to 1985 she was professor of music history, theory and piano at the Music Lyceum in Cluj. Afterwards she worked for the Italian Ministry of the Interior as a translator and interpreter and since 1988 has been on the staff of the Indiana University School of Music at Bloomington. She is currently completing, as a doctoral dissertation, an annotated translation of the anonymous 14th-century treatise Quatuor principalia musicae.

John Pickard is a composer and lecturer at University College North Wales at Bangor. He is currently writing a work for the BBC Welsh Symphony Orchestra commissioned for the 1993 North Wales Music Festival.

Antony Bye is editor of The Musical Times.

Steven Swartz is a New York-based composer and music journalist. His latest work, scored for guitar and piano, is entitled Half of Life and was commissioned by the Schanzet/Speach Duo.

Laurence Hughes is a composer and freelance broadcaster and writer on music.

Paul Griffiths is principal music critic of the New Yorker.

Robin Holloway will be featured composer at next year's Bath and Warwick Festivals, 1993 being his fiftieth birthday year.

David Wordsworth was until recently Director of Music at Stoke College, Suffolk, and is now engaged on a Ph.D. thesis on the music of Górecki.
