Pan-Africanism and Nationalism in West Africa 1900–1945

A Study in Ideology and Social Classes

J. Ayodele Langley

This book is the first detailed study of the origins of Pan-African politics in West Africa and also of Nationalist ideology and social classes there during the inter-war period. The author describes the personalities, movements, and ideas that formed the Pan-African movement; of particular interest is his rediscovery of the francophone African contribution to Pan-Africanism, and his analysis of the reception of Black American ideologies in West Africa. £6-50 Oxford Studies in African Affairs

Railways and the Copper Mines of Katanga

S. E. Katzenellenbogen

Big business and the Governments of Belgium, Britain, Germany, France, Portugal, and South Africa became involved in the Katanga copper mines and in the railways built to link them to coastal ports. Individuals exerted great influence on the course of events, most prominently Robert Williams, whose vision and tenacity of purpose overcame Belgian pessimism as to the value of Katanga's copper deposits and made possible the completion of the Benguela Railway against tremendous odds. £3-75 Oxford Studies in African Affairs

An Introduction to Benin Art and Technology

Philip J. C. Dark

This book provides for the first time a brief but comprehensive introduction to the art of Benin and the craft of the Edo artist. It reviews the history of the development of the art from the fifteenth century to the present and discusses some of its masterpieces from a western point of view before turning to consider the context in which the art is produced. 80 plates £8-50

Sources of Yoruba History

Saburi O. Biobaku

An historian of the Yoruba, still largely a non-literate society, cannot ignore oral traditions in all their forms. He has available only scanty written sources and required the disciplines of archaeology, ethnography, linguistics, and sociology to elucidate this material. This archetypal historical material is here exemplified, analysed, and viewed critically, as a prelude to the writing of a history of the Yoruba. £3-50 Oxford Studies in African Affairs
