

RADICAL HISTORY Review

Looking for something radically different?

For more than a quarter of a century, Radical History Review has stood at the point where rigorous historical scholarship and active political engagement converge. The journal is edited by a collective of talented historians—men and women with diverse backgrounds, research interests, and professional perspectives. Positioning itself unabashedly to the left of center, it carries its political legacy as a sacred trust.

Articles in RHR address issues of gender, race, sexuality, imperialism, and class, stretching the boundaries of historical analysis to explore Western and non-Western histories.

Recent and forthcoming special issues include “Health Politics/Health Workers,” “Radicalism in Transition,” “The Uses of the Folk,” and “Terror and History.”
