CAMBRIDGE COMMONWEALTH SERIES

Developing the Third World

The Experience of the Nineteen Sixties

Edited by RONALD ROBINSON

The Cambridge Conferences on Development gather together practical administrators and technical specialists in many fields to examine a particular problem in development strategy for the Third World. This volume selects some of the most important papers which have been delivered. This book is unusual and valuable because it gives the working experience of the practitioners themselves—the public servants, planners and advisers—in their job of making poor countries richer.

Silver Mining and Society in Colonial Mexico Zacatecas 1546-1700

P.J. BAKEWELL

An examination of silver mining and society in colonial Mexico concentrating upon Zacatecas, the centre of the principal silver-mining region. From a detailed study of archives in both Spain and Mexico, Dr Bakewell is able to provide an entirely new chronology for the development of Zacatecas and the Mexican mining industry up to 1700.

Latin America:

Geographical Perspectives

Edited by Harold Blakemore
and Clifford T. Smith

This volume appears at a time when there is a revival of interest in Latin America, after years of neglect, in Britain, Europe and the United States. In Britain there is increasing evidence of both governmental and business realisation of the continent's importance.

Although Latin America is often regarded as a single entity, the most striking feature of this vast area is its diversity – from country to country and even from region to region within each nation. This collection of geographical essays consists of regional studies by individual authors, each of whom has first-hand knowledge of his area. Each author considers the specific problems of the region he discusses in their geographical, economic and social context, emphasising the particular features of the cultural landscape that are of continuing significance.

Special attention is given to Mexico; the Caribbean; Central America, including Panama; Venezuela and Colombia; the Guianas; the Central Andes; Brazil; the River Plate countries; and Chile.

Bartolomé De Las Casas In History

Toward an Understanding of the Man and His Work

Edited by Juan Friede and Benjamin Keen

"Four centuries after his death, the star of Las Casas's reputation stands higher than ever in the firmament of world opinion," write the editors of this book honoring the memory of Las Casas. A controversial figure in his own day (1474-1566), Las Casas might well be called the New World's first political activist. Championing the cause of the Indians in "Overseas Spain," he became their "Protector" and devoted the rest of his life to the destruction of Indian slavery—a highly volatile movement. The purpose of this collection of essays by eleven scholars from seven countries is to broaden the understanding of Las Casas's life and work by making available in English translation the findings of leading modern European and Latin American specialists.

The Americas and Civilization

DARCY RIBEIRO

Written by the former Brazilian Minister of Education, now an exile in Venezuela, and destroyed before publication in Brazil, this book is an intellectual tour-de-force which may become a historian's source-book for revolutions not yet staged. Its value as a third-world assessment of the reasons for the disparity in achievement between North and Latin America is without parallel.
