JULIUS HIRSCHBERG

THE HISTORY OF OPHTHALMOLOGY

ELEVEN VOLUMES

*Translated by Frederick C. Blodi, M. D.
Professor and Head, Department of Ophthalmology
The University of Iowa*

The History of Ophthalmology by Professor Julius Hirschberg is well known all over the world. However, as it was up to now only available in German it was not as widely used and quoted as it should have been.

Dr. Blodi translated not only the German text, but also all quotations which in the German edition are printed in the language of the original source, most of them in Greek, Latin, French and Italian.

Professor Hirschberg is the only author who was capable of reading all the source material in the original language. He traveled around the world and found many original manuscripts for the first time. He was supported by numerous friends and colleagues. He wrote this history over a period of nearly 20 years between 1889 and 1918.

About this monumental work, and his author see:
 Snyder: "Julius Hirschberg, the neglected Historian of Ophthalmology" in:
American Journal of Ophthalmology, Vol. 91, pp. 664–676 (1981)

and:

American Journal of Ophthalmology, 1983, vol. 95, february, pp. 265 – 266

"Hirschberg's History ranks as the most comprehensive medical history ever written." "... fascinating leisure reading as well."

"The appearance of the first volume of a new edition represents a welcome addition to the ophthalmic literature."

"Now, with the advent of Hirschberg's magnificent work in English, all ophthalmologists everywhere may share in this great gift."

This monumental history will now be available in English. Volume 1 and 2 are now available. The first volume contains the history of ophthalmology in antiquity and consists of 260 chapters. It deals with:

- a. Ophthalmology in Ancient Egypt
- b. Ophthalmology in Assyria and Babylonia
- c. Ophthalmology in Israel
- d. Ophthalmology in Persia
- e. Ophthalmology in India
- f. Ophthalmology in Ancient Greece
  - 1. Optics in Ancient Greece
  - 2. The Anatomy of the Eye in Ancient Greece
- g. Ocular Medications in Antiquity
- h. The Clinical Ophthalmology of the Successors to the Alexandrian School
- i. Galenus
- j. The Late Hellenistic and Byzantine Collections, Textbooks and Excerpts
- k. The Greek Dogmas of Ophthalmology

All these chapters are subdivided into parts that deal with therapy, anatomy, physiology, etc. The Table of Contents of the first volume alone extends over eight pages (not including an index).

Volume II deals with the history of ophthalmology in Arabia and in Europe during the Middle Ages (with a history of spectacles).

Volumes III containing ophthalmology of modern times, the 16th and 17th centuries and the Renaissance of ophthalmology in the 18th century will appear in 1984.

It is planned to publish the following volumes in rapid sequence, usually two to three volumes per year.

These books will be printed on high quality art print paper. They will be elegantly bound with gold impregnation.

The price of each volume will be $ 88.00 provided that they have been ordered before volume 3 appears. This is a subscription price. If the entire series is ordered, the price per volume will not change over the following years. Included in the price is packing, insurance and postal fees. Single volumes are also available at a price a US $ 108.00 each. Each volume of the series will be billed individually.

Endangered Lives

Public Health in Victorian Britain

ANTHONY WOHL

An original, lively and important book which examines the social and physical environment in which the Victorians lived, the effects their surroundings had upon health and the way in which public health was administered.

'This deeply-researched, historical account by a professor who specialises in the era, is full of eye-opening detail of the horrors endured by many of the inhabitants of "this blessed plot, this Earth, this realm, this England" in Victoria's reign... This factual study reveals much intriguing detail about day-to-day life of the times.'

Occupational Monopoly and Modern Medicine

GERALD LARKIN

The history of the provision of health care is one of continuous struggles between various groups attempting to secure a monopolistic dominance. This in turn has involved the state in attempts to mediate between differing interests and establish controls over practice, training, and registration.

Gerald Larkin's study is an account of developments in this area in the first half of the twentieth century, which saw a dramatic expansion, both in the numbers of health workers, and types of health occupation. In particular he analyses the history of four groups: ophthalmic opticians, radiographers, physiotherapists, and chiroprodists.

Managing the Mind

A study in the development of medical psychology in early 19th century Britain

MICHAEL DONNELLY

In this study of the formative period of medical psychology the author examines materials relating to the period 1790 to 1845 and tries to recount the conditions, both institutional and ideological, under which the new discipline emerged. The greater part of the book concerns those current 'perceptions' of madness, which, although hardly elaborated with scientific rigour, marked off the terrain on which medical psychology advanced and informed the practices which were established in the new lunatic asylums.
