‘THE 1000 YEAR CAMP’

This Summer . . .

Fifty students will converge on the Isle of Wight, England, to participate in a unique holiday school, THE 1000 YEAR CAMP. Based in the residence of one of Britain’s finest sailing schools, the participants will explore the history of the Island in a unique way through the making of a dramatic film. A famous Island home, Swainston Manor, which has over one-thousand years of history, is the prime location for the filming. The Swainston estate of rolling fields and woodland with a backdrop of the sea is only one of the many places the campers will explore: there is historic Carisbrooke Castle where Charles I was imprisoned as well as Queen Victoria’s sumptuous summer residence, Osborne House.

Michael Asti-Rose, the award winning Canadian film maker, will be directing the film project, though all the way it will be the students who are the script-writers, directors and actors.

A great emphasis will be placed on the centre’s activities: there will be regular classes of Modern Dance, Sailing, Pottery and other crafts. Local contacts with historic Island families will take place on a regular basis as part of the investigation and “time-travel” in the period 1000 to 2000 A.D

And at the end of it, participants in THE 1000 YEAR CAMP will have access to the film they have made.

Age range: 16 to 19 / Fees: $790.00 (this includes a seat on a New York—London Charter return as well as all expenses connected with the Camp in Britain).
