

BOOKS ARE ESSENTIAL

— as they have been for many years —

They entertain, they stimulate thought and in turn action, they spread knowledge, they record facts, and they can not be ignored; The Catholic Herald does not overlook this fact.

Book reviews appear regularly in The Catholic Herald to assist your choice of reading. Authoritative critics review an extensive selection of literature including Art, Biography, Drama, History, Philosophy, Politics, Religion, Social Problems, Travel and a wide choice of fiction. It is the policy of The Catholic Herald to attach the greatest importance to all books, to the extent that they are seen bearing on Christian values—in the wider sense—in the world today. Carefully scrutinised publishers' announcements in the advertisement columns extend the selection of books provided by reviews.

As a part of its book policy, The Catholic Herald has, from time to time, produced more comprehensive book supplements; Another—
