Atom Probe Tomography (APT) and Applications in Materials Science

Wednesday, January 20 | 12:00 pm – 1:30 pm (ET)

Atom probe tomography (APT) has emerged as an important analytical technique and an ultimate characterization technique for surface science, especially for obtaining atomistic structure and chemical composition information at nanometer and atomistic length scales. The January 2016 issue of MRS Bulletin focuses on the applications of APT and how these are leading to new insights in materials research. This webinar will expand on the topics explored in the articles in this issue of MRS Bulletin.

► Attendance for this and all MRS OnDemand Webinars is FREE, but advance registration is required.

Visit www.mrs.org/webinars today for more information.

About the Materials Research Society

The Materials Research Society (MRS) is a not-for-profit scientific association founded in 1973 to promote interdisciplinary goal-oriented basic research on materials of technological importance. Membership in the Society includes almost 16,000 scientists from industrial, government, and university research laboratories in the United States and abroad.

The Society's interdisciplinary approach to the exchange of technical information is qualitatively different from that provided by single-discipline professional societies because it promotes technical exchange across the various fields of science affecting materials development. MRS sponsors three major international annual meetings encompassing many topical symposia, as well as numerous single-topic scientific meetings each year. It recognizes professional and technical excellence, conducts tutorials, and fosters technical exchange in various local geographical regions through Section activities and Student Chapters on university campuses.

MRS publishes symposia proceedings, the MRS Bulletin, and other volumes on current scientific developments. The Journal of Materials Research, the archival journal spanning fundamental developments in materials science, is published twenty-four times a year by Cambridge University Press for the MRS.

MRS Communications is a full-color letters and perspectives journal focused on groundbreaking work across the spectrum of materials research.

MRS is an Affiliated Society of the American Institute of Physics and participates in the international arena of materials research through associations with professional organizations such as the International Union of Materials Research Societies.

For further information on the Society's activities, contact MRS Headquarters, 506 Keystone Drive, Warrendale, PA 15086-7573; telephone (724) 779-3003; fax (724) 779-8313.
