

Expedition in East-Central Africa 1888-1891: A Report

By Carl Wiese

Edited, with an Introduction and Comments
by Harry W. Langworthy

Wiese's journal is the only contemporary description of the culture and politics of early-day Zambia, Malawi, and Mozambique. It is a day-to-day account of the German hunter and trader's unofficial Portuguese mission that he led to the court of the Ngoni king Mpezeni. Wiese describes in detail the geography of the area, African political life and economy, trade negotiations, and daily life.

"Without boundaries there is chaos, not only linguistic but social. A major tenet of my argument will be that rituals, especially those related to pollution beliefs, can best be understood as elements within a general communication system, and that one of their essential functions is to make statements about boundaries." — the author

Transformations in Slavery
A History of Slavery in Africa
PAUL E. LOVEJOY

Paul Lovejoy traces the history of slavery in Africa from the beginning of the Islamic slave trade in the fifteenth century to the institution's demise in the early twentieth century. He corrects the common misconception that African slavery was a mild system that resulted in the assimilation of slaves into African society, showing instead that slaves were used extensively in production and that slavery in Africa, like slavery in the Americas, resulted from Africa's position on the periphery of capitalist Europe. Kings, Commoners and Concessionaires
The Evolution and Dissolution of the Nineteenth-Century Swazi State
PHILIP BONNER

The first full-length study of the political economy of a post-Mfecane state, an outgrowth of the nineteenth-century Zulu revolution. The author examines the evolution of the Swazi state and the dynamics of its stratified system, focusing on the "layering" of society through conquest, and the entrenchment of inequality through marriage and inheritance patterns. $49.50

Central Africa To 1870
Zambezia, Zaire and the South Atlantic
DAVID BIRMINGHAM

This survey of the political, social, and economic history of Central Africa between 1050 and 1870 consists of chapters taken from various volumes of The Cambridge History of Africa. It covers the transition from early Iron Age culture to a more mature culture characterized by long-distance trade, more advanced technologies, and the emergence of complex political systems. "...an excellent overview of central Africa... can be used with confidence by students and scholars alike..."—Canadian Journal of History Cloth $27.50 Paper $9.95

The Political Economy of Pondoland 1860–1930
Production, Labour, Migrancy and Chiefs
in Rural South Africa
WILLIAM BEINART

An examination of how the people of one formerly independent African chiefdom were absorbed into wider South African society during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Using new documentary evidence and oral testimony, the author discusses changes in agricultural production in the early stages of colonization, the changing patterns of rural production and labor migrancy, and new patterns of rural differentiation. $39.50

Land in Dār Für
Charters and Related Documents from the
Dār Für Sultanate
R.S. O'FAHEY and M.I. ABU SALIM

Drawn from Arabic land charters, this is a study of the administration of a Sudanese sultanate in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. Translations of forty-seven selected charters are presented to illustrate the complexity of land as an issue in the sultanate. $29.95

Amílcar Cabral
Revolutionary Leadership and People's War
PATRICK CHABAL

"Chabal's scholarly yet well-written and very readable work is the first such in-depth study of one of the more important leaders of the African liberation movements. His fascinating biography of Cabral... does more than recount the events of his life: It provides the entire matrix for the anti-colonial struggle, analyzes Cabral's political and social thought and influence (especially on the PAIGC), and provides a comparison of the struggle in Guinea-Bissau to that in Angola and Mozambique... Highly recommended."—Library Journal Cloth $44.50 Paper $16.95

Rhodes and Rhodesia

THE WHITE CONQUEST OF ZIMBABWE 1884-1902

Arthur Keppel-Jones

The conquest and colonization of Zimbabwe and the establishment of Southern Rhodesia are the focus of this volume. Covering the period from the beginnings of British involvement in Bechuanaland to the death of Cecil Rhodes, its emphasis is on the white invaders and its chief concern is with individuals, their motives, actions, and influence on events. It becomes clear that by 1902 Southern Rhodesia was already set on the road that would lead to the upheavals of the second half of the twentieth century. $60.00
