
About the Authors

Ronet Bachman is Associate Professor in the Department of Sociology and Criminal Justice at the University of Delaware. Her research interests include the epidemiology and etiology of violence victimization, particularly regarding gender, race, and age differences.

Robert Brame is a graduate student in the Department of Criminology and Criminal Justice at the University of Maryland. He is primarily interested in empirical tests of criminological theory.

David P. Farrington is Professor of Psychological Criminology at Cambridge University and Director of the Cambridge Study in Delinquent Development. His main research interest is in the development of offending and antisocial behavior from childhood to adulthood.

George Gonos is Assistant Professor of Sociology at Centenary College and the author of articles in American Sociological Review and other journals. Currently, he is engaged in research on the restructuring of U.S. employment relations, with particular attention to its political and sociolegal aspects, and is writing a book on "temporary help."

Herbert Jacob was Professor of Political Science at Northwestern University. He was co-author most recently with Erhard Blankenburg, Herbert M. Kritzer, Doris Marie Provine, and Joseph Sanders of Courts, Law, and Politics in Comparative Perspective (Yale University Press, 1996). He served from 1991 to his death as editor of the Law & Politics Book Review which has a direct readership of about 1,000 subscribers. He was President of the Law & Society Association during 1981–1983.

Christopher P. Manfredi is Associate Professor of Political Science at McGill University, Montreal, Quebec, Canada. He is the author of Judicial Power and the Charter: Canada and the Paradox of liberal Constitutionalism (University of Oklahoma Press, 1993). A second book, Children's Justice: The Supreme Court and the Constitutional Domestication of Juvenile Justice, will be published this year by the University Press of Kansas.

Daniel Nagin is Professor of Management at the H. John Heinz III School of Public Policy and Management at Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh. He is also Research Coordinator for the National Consortium on Violence Research which is centered at the Heinz School. His research focuses on the evolution of crime and deviance over the life course, the preventive effects of sanctions, and the development of statistical methods for analyzing longitudinal data.

Raymond Paternoster is Professor in the Department of Criminology and Criminal Justice at the University of Maryland. His research interests include theories of social control and quantitative methods in criminology.

Greg Pogarsky is a doctoral candidate at the H. John Heinz III School of Public Policy and Management at Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh. He is also an attorney, having practiced as a criminal public defender and civil litigator in New Jersey from 1987 to 1992. Currently, his research focuses on the impact of damage caps on the settlement of lawsuits.

Lawrence W. Sherman teaches criminology at the University of Maryland and is currently directing an experiment in procedural justice and reintegrative shaming at the Research School of Social Sciences, Australian National University, Canberra.

Barbara Yngvesson is Professor of Anthropology at Hampshire College. Her research and teaching focus on the construction and transformation of legal and cultural meanings, on cultural identity and the negotiation of difference, and on globalization and the interpretation of rights. She has carried out research in Sweden, the mainland United States, and Hawaii, and is the author of Virtuous Citizens, Disruptive Subjects: Order and Complaint in a New England Court (1993) and Law and Community in Three American Towns (1994, co-authored with Carol Greenhouse and David Engel). Her current research examines discourses of authenticity in domestic U.S. and intercountry adoption practices and the reimagining of the "local" in contests over preservation in a former leprosarium in Hawaii.