

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

PIERS BEIRNE is Professor of Sociology and Legal Studies at the University of Southern Maine. His research interests include the intellectual history of criminology, comparative criminology, and Soviet legal theory.

JONATHAN D. CASPER is a Senior Research Fellow at the American Bar Foundation and Professor of Political Science and member of the research faculty of the Center for Urban Affairs and Policy Research at Northwestern University. His current research interests focus upon jury decision-making processes.

MARK A. COHEN is Assistant Professor of Management at the Owen Graduate School of Management, Vanderbilt University. In 1985, he received his Ph.D. in economics from Carnegie-Mellon University, and has served as a staff economist to the Federal Trade Commission and the U.S. Sentencing Commission. His current research focuses on judicial discretion in the sentencing of antitrust and other corporate criminal offenders.

DALE DANNEFER is Associate Professor of Education and Sociology at the Graduate School of Education and Human Development, University of Rochester. His previous articles on juvenile justice processing have appeared in the Law & Society Review and the American Journal of Sociology. His current research focuses on the sociology of aging and the life course. He is deputy editor of Sociology of Education.

BONNIE FISHER is Assistant Professor at the Department of City and Regional Planning, Ohio State University. Her primary research focus is on policy-making processes with emphasis on local-level citizen participation and crime.

ALAN HUNT is a Reader in Law at Middlesex Polytechnic, London. His research interests include jurisprudence, critical legal studies, and Soviet legal theory.

DOUGLAS W. MAYNARD is Associate Professor of Sociology at the University of Wisconsin, Madison. He is the author of Inside Plea Bargaining: The Language of Negotiation and continues an interest in language use in legal settings with current, collaborative research on jury deliberations.

DAVID McDOWALL is Associate Professor in the School of Criminal Justice, State University of New York at Albany. He is currently studying issues related to the social distribution of criminal violence.

RUSSELL K. SCHUTT is Associate Professor of Sociology and Director of the Graduate Program in Applied Sociology at the University of Massachusetts, Boston. He writes on legal decision making, the sociology of organizations and occupations, homelessness, and the teaching of research methods. He is the author of Organization in a Changing Environment: Unionization of Welfare Employees (SUNY Press). He is currently studying organizations that provide services to the homeless.

CARROLL SERON is an Associate Professor of Public Administration at Baruch College, City University of New York.

SIMON I. SINGER is Associate Professor of Sociology, State University of New York at Buffalo. His current research focuses on juvenile delinquency and juvenile justice policy.

TOM R. TYLER is Research Fellow at the American Bar Foundation and Professor of Psychology and Political Science and member of the research faculty of the Center for Urban Affairs and Policy Research at Northwestern University. He is the author of two recent books: The Social Psychology of Procedural Justice (coauthored with Allan Lind) and Why People Follow the Law: Procedural Justice, Legitimacy, and Compliance.

BARBARA YNGVESSON is Professor of Anthropology at Hampshire College in Amherst, Massachusetts. Her research addresses the interplay of dispute processing and systems of normative order and has involved empirical work in Sweden and western New England.