

Editorial

As of 1 October 2000, the editorial office for the journal moves to a different address, when I take up a new post in London. I will be sorry to move from Oxford, but welcome the opportunities and challenges of a new job. I will try to continue to edit the journal at least as well as before! Manuscripts for publication (and all other journal related material) should be directed to:

Professor Paul Salkovskis,
Editor, Behavioural and Cognitive Psychotherapy,
Department of Psychology,
Institute of Psychiatry,
De Crespigny Park,
Denmark Hill,
London SE5 8AF.

We have been fortunate in recruiting to the editorial team four international editors who will pre-screen manuscript submissions in German, Italian, French and Spanish. Welcome to Cristina Botella (Spanish submissions), Jean Cottraux (French submissions), Ezio Sanavio (Italian submissions) and Winfred Rief (German submissions). Full details of submission procedure and other aspects of this new feature of the journal can be found in the Editorial Statement, together with the addresses of each international editor. The Editorial Statement appears in the January and July issue each year.

This issue contains the obituary for an old friend of the BABCP, who was also a member of our editorial advisory board. Neil Jacobsen, who was a key figure in the development of CBT, has been a major contributor to several BABCP conferences. His personal, clinical and scientific contributions to our work will be greatly missed.

Paul Salkovskis