The DUBLIN REVIEW

This famous journal, founded in 1836 by Daniel O'Connell and Cardinal Wiseman, has recently been reorganized. It now appears three times a year. The quality of the new series can best be judged from a summary of the contents of the first two series, copies of which are still obtainable:

No. 440. (Published Spring 1947)

Vitoria and International Law.....by J. L. BRIERLY
Existentialism and Religion.....by FREDERICK C. COPLESTON
Political Terms and Spiritual Values.....by ROSALIND MURRAY
The Meaning of History.....by T. S. GREGORY
The Jewish Migration.....by MICHAEL DERRICK
The American Approach to Europe.....
..... by ERIK VON KUEHNELT-LEDDIHN

No. 441. (Published Autumn 1947)

Alice Meynellby VIOLA MEYNELL
Cervantes — Three Studies.....by E. ALLISON PEERS,
EDWARD SARMIENTO and A. A. PARKER
Biology and Man.....by F. SHERWOOD TAYLOR
Tendencies in the Church of England
.....by HUMPHREY J. T. JOHNSON
Some Unpublished Letters of Cardinal Vaughan.....
..... by SHANE LESLIE
Post-War French Literature.....by HENRI CLOUARD
Reports on the Soviet Unionby WALDEMAR GURIAN

The Spring issue contains articles by the following:

A. C. F. BEALES
FREDERICK C. COPLESTON, S.J.
WALDEMAR GURIAN
EDWARD HUTTON
HENRI DE LUBAC, S.J.

A feature of the DUBLIN is the generous space allotted to book reviews.
