Austro-Marxism

Texts translated by Tom Bottomore and Patrick Goode, with an introduction by Tom Bottomore

These texts introduce the work of an important and influential school of Marxist thinkers – most prominent amongst them being Max Adler, Otto Bauer, Rudolf Hilferding, and Karl Renner. Through their writings and activities they had considerable influence on European socialism in the first two decades of this century. £7.95 paper covers £3.95

The Social and Political Thought of Leon Trotsky

Baruch Knei-Paz

This is the first comprehensive exposition and critical analysis of Trotsky's social and political ideas. Dr. Knei-Paz shows that Trotsky's was the most far-reaching and original of theoretical attempts to deal with the relationship between Marxism and the Social-Democratic movement on the one hand and backwardness and the problems of preindustrial or underdeveloped society on the other. £15

The New Liberalism

An Ideology of Social Reform

Michael Freedon

'Michael Freedon's challenging and elegantly written book about the philosophical foundations of the pre-World War One Liberalism suggests that thought about political fundamentals can thrive in the supposedly arid ground of British empiricism. His central argument is clear and appealing.' New Society. £10

The Social and Political Thought of Herbert Spencer

David Wiltshire

Previous studies of Spencer's life have paid little attention to his thought. This book redresses the balance by setting his writings against the background of his private life and the era of change through which he lived. It also provides a sustained critique of Spencerian theory, focusing upon its two basic principles of individualism and evolution, and examining the relationship between them. £7.50 Oxford Historical Monographs
