An Atlas of Russian History

by Allen F. Chew

Accurate, uncluttered, and easy to read, this atlas shows how Russia's boundaries have changed from the formation of Kievan Rus in the ninth century to the most recent revisions resulting from World War II. Large in format (8 $\frac{1}{4}$  x 10 $\frac{3}{4}$  inches), with a spiral binding which allows the maps to lie flat, the book contains thirty-four handsomely drawn maps. Each map is accompanied by a descriptive text. Combining thorough scholarship with the most practical features for use, this atlas will become an indispensable supplement to texts on Russian history for the historian and student. \$3.95

Dostoevsky's Quest for Form

by Robert L. Jackson

This study presents the main body of Dostoevsky's aesthetic thought and reveals its centrality to his world outlook. Using essays, notebooks, and letters, as well as fiction, Robert Jackson traces the development of the writer's attitude toward such problems as beauty, the artistic representation of reality, and the function of literature. $6.00

The Jews in Russia

by Louis Greenberg

"A scholarly book of great interest to students of the nineteenth century."—Book-of-the-Month Club News. "An exceptionally able and informative work—outstanding even in a series of such importance as the Yale Historical Publications. Years of research . . . have culminated in a volume not alone highly informative but of unusual reader interest."—The Jewish Outlook. "An essential contribution to the study of modern Russian social history."—American Historical Review.
