

Acknowledgments

More than other books, putting together an edited volume is a collective endeavor. We first thank the contributors for their timely and incisive contributions to this volume. The Carnegie Corporation and Hewlett Foundation provided essential funding, through an Andrew Carnegie Fellowship and support for a January 2020 roundtable on public options at Vanderbilt Law School. Quenna Stewart's assistance was critical to making the roundtable successful. At Cambridge University Press, Matt Galloway and Cameron Daddis navigated the book through the editing process with great skill. Finally, thanks to our families for suffering now through two books' worth of discussion on public options.

