

FROM THE EDITORIAL BOARD

This past summer saw the retirement from its Editorial Board of the Canadian Journal of Philosophy's longest-serving editor: Kai Nielsen, who was one of the journal's founding editors in 1971. Kai worked indefatigably for the journal and helped establish its reputation, especially in political philosophy. His special love was the journal's Supplementary Volumes, of which he edited several of the most successful; his last task is co-editing the 1996 Volume on Nationalism. We are deeply in Kai's debt for his contributions over the years and wish him all the best in life after the CJP.

Replacing Kai on the Board are two new editors: Richmond Campbell and Arthur Ripstein. Though we can hardly expect 25 years' service from them, we welcome them to the journal and look forward to their contributions.
