Private International Law in the Netherlands

and Supplement 1995

By R. Van Rooij and M.V. Polak

The primary aim of the main work and the 1995 supplement to this book is to provide Dutch and foreign lawyers with an up-to-date survey of the present state of private international law in the Netherlands. The book, therefore, describes Dutch private international law as it is applied by the courts. The more important cases are summarized throughout the text. At the end of each chapter the reader will find references to international agreements, legislative materials and to literature.

Private International Law in the Netherlands contains four parts: 1. Procedural private international law (jurisdiction, enforcement, arbitration, international litigation); 2. Contractual and non-contractual obligations, property and corporations; 3. Family law, matrimonial (property) law, children, divorce, maintenance and succession; and 4. General principles of private international law. The appendices set out the most important treatises and statutes; extensive indices and cross-references are included for purposes of quick reference.

This supplement updates the publication and follows the general scheme of the main work.

Although the supplement's authors originally set out to prepare a summary update, the resulting work is quite extensive. In 1995, private international law in the Netherlands is even more fragmented than it was in 1987, and hence, cannot be described in just a few pages. The manuscript for this supplement was completed in January 1995.

The main work and supplement have been produced by the T.M.C. Asser Instituut, The Hague, and published by Kluwer Law International.
