REVITALIZING ANTITRUST IN ITS SECOND CENTURY

Essays on Legal, Economic, and Political Policy
Edited by Harry First, Eleanor M. Fox, and Robert Pitofsky

A distinguished group of policymakers, legal scholars, and economists challenge the prevailing view that anti-trust legislation is no longer relevant, arguing instead that antitrust, progressively construed and adapted to today's economic realities, remains the most promising national economic policy for this country.

New in the CONSTITUTIONALISM
AND DEMOCRACY Series

Producers versus Capitalists Constitutional Conflict in Antebellum America

Tony A. Freyer

"Tony Freyer once again shows that he is among the nation's foremost legal historians. His new book on how constitutionalism accommodated producer values to the triumph of capitalism is splendid; it is spiced with fresh insights of considerable import."

—Leonard W. Levy, Editor,
Encyclopedia of the American Presidency
$37.50 cloth

The Constitutional Thought of Thomas Jefferson

David N. Mayer

"The Constitutional Thought of Thomas Jefferson fills a gap in the voluminous Jefferson literature by recounting, in considerable detail, the nature, sources, and development of Jefferson's constitutional thought from the 1760s to the 1820s. There is no other book-length study of Jefferson's constitutional thought worth reading."

—Herbert Sloan, Barnard College
$39.50 cloth

Juries and Judges versus the Law Virginia's Provincial Legal Perspective 1783-1828

F. Thornton Miller

"This book makes a notable contribution to an important chapter in the legal history of the early Republic. . . . As an illuminating counterpoint to the triumph of Marshallian judicial nationalism, it enhances our appreciation of both sides of that pivotal contest."

Citizen Worker

The Experience of Workers in the United States with Democracy and the Free Market during the Nineteenth Century
David Montgomery

"To understand the ideological and social transformations at work in that era one could have no better guide than David Montgomery, the nation's foremost labor historian, whose scholarship and commitment have inspired an entire generation of social historians... Citizen Worker is one of those books that remind us of the questions we have forgotten how to ask... Answers are hard to come by, but David Montgomery's meticulous scholarship and radical sensibility get us started in the right direction."

Home to Work

Motherhood and the Politics of Industrial Homework in the United States

Eileen Boris

Gender ideologies have shaped the battle over homework from the 1870s. But by the 1980s, the middle-class mother at the keyboard replaced the victimized immigrant. This record of the voice of homeworking women in the debate over their labor also provides an historical context to the Reaganite lifting of New Deal bans.

Crime, Disorder, and the Risorgimento

The Politics of Policing in Bologna

Steven C. Hughes

This book provides a meticulous examination of the ideology, structure, and functions of the papal police as they operated in the city and province of Bologna in the period before Italian unity, and in doing so offers an important new interpretation of the Risorgimento.

Crime, Society and the Law in Renaissance Italy

Trevor Dean and K. J. P. Lowe, Editors

This volume puts crime and disorder in Renaissance Italy firmly within its political and social context. The contributors include English, Italian, American and Australian scholars. The volume focuses on new material and addresses all stages in the judicial process from the drafting of laws to the rounding up of bandits. The articles range geographically across most of the peninsula. This is the only single-volume treatment of the subject available in English.

The Roman Law Tradition

A.D.E. Lewis and D. J. Ibbetson, Editors

The law developed by the ancient Romans remains a powerful legal and political instrument today. In The Roman Law Tradition a general editorial introduction complements a series of more detailed essays by an international team of distinguished legal scholars exploring the various ways in which Roman law has affected and continues to affect patterns of legal decision-making throughout the world.

JOHN DITTMER

“John Dittmer has written the definitive analytical history of the black freedom movement in the nation’s most recalcitrant state,” writes Julian Bond. “This is an exciting and dramatic story of unknown heroes and heroines perserving over decades of quiet struggle against rampant terror. He exposes the villains—home grown and in Washington and New York—who resisted them with lynch mob justice and sophisticated political backstabbing.”

Slavery, the Civil Law, and the Supreme Court of Louisiana

Judith Kelleher Schafer

This is the first complete study of any state's slave law and its courts throughout the entire antebellum era. Schafer scrutinized 1,200 appeals involving slaves as plaintiffs, defendants, or objects of lawsuits or criminal actions. She presents numerous concise case histories, stories that are fascinating and at times heartbreaking in the particulars they reveal about slaves' existence.

The Institute of

The Many Legalities of Early America

The Institute of Early American History and Culture and the Institute for Bill of Rights Law announce a conference on law and early America, c. 1500–1775. Scheduled for the fall of 1996, the conference will assess the state of current research on the meaning and expression of law and legality in early America and debate the feasibility of constructing a paradigmatic narrative for early American legal history. Four themes have been selected to structure these enquiries:

I. The Legalities of Settlement, covering such topics as indigenous legal cultures and the role of law and ideologies of legality in European and indigenous discourses of contact, interaction, conquest, and colonization;

II. Cultures in Formation, denoting analyses of law's role in projecting European social and material circumstance onto American environments, of the dynamics of interaction between different legal cultures across settlement frontiers, and of the varying composition of early American legal cultures;

III. The Reproduction of Settler Societies, e.g., analysis of the legal construction of key social, economic and ideological categories of individual and group identity (age, gender, race, ethnicity, class, proprietorship, possession), and of the distribution of jurisdictional authority among institutions (households, parishes, localities, political-administrative structures) by which inhabitants were organized and governed;

IV. Law's Rule, e.g., the dynamics of early American law as a mode of procedure and of implementation, questions of access to legal process, the relationship between law in elite politics and law as popular social experience, and the cultural foundations for legal discourse's transformative role in late colonial politics.

Interested scholars are invited to send proposals, with a curriculum vitae, to: Conference Committee (Law in Early America), c/o Christopher L. Tomlins, The American Bar Foundation, 750 North Lake Shore Drive, Chicago, Illinois 60611. Further information is available from Mr. Tomlins.

Please include a short prospectus describing the substance of the proposed paper and broadly setting out its relationship to current scholarship and to the further development of early American legal history. Proposals for papers in any area of early American legal history are welcome, but those breaking new ground with reference to one or more of the advertised themes are particularly encouraged. Consideration will be given to editing the papers for publication as an Institute volume.
