Mystical Bedlam

Madness, Anxiety and Healing in Seventeenth-century England

MICHAEL MACDONALD

Mystical Bedlam explores the social history of insanity in early seventeenth-century England by means of a detailed analysis of the records of Richard Napier, a clergyman and astrological physician, who treated over 2000 mentally disturbed patients between 1597 and 1634. It both provides a contribution to the history of medicine and a survey of some of the darkest regions of the mental world of the seventeenth-century English population.

A Generous Confidence

Thomas Story Kirkbride and the Art of Asylum-Keeping 1840-1883

NANCY TOMES

A Generous Confidence is a social history of medical practice in a private nineteenth-century asylum, the Pennsylvania Hospital for the Insane in Philadelphia. Besides vividly recreating everyday life in the asylum, the author concentrates on the career of Thomas Story Kirkbride, the chief physician from 1840 to 1883, discussing his use of medical ideas, hospital design and social conventions to foster the public's 'generous confidence' in his ability to treat mental disorders.

The London Phrenology Company Limited

The ancient study of Phrenology has changed its expression throughout the centuries. In Victorian times it reached its zenith as a 'science' with the belief that both one's character and future could be read from the skull.

Because of the rarity and expense of Victorian Phrenological busts, the London Phrenology Company commissioned Coalport to produce a Limited Edition fine bone china replica.

These busts have been sculptured to an exquisite standard, they stand 11" high, on a base of 6" x 6". The Faculties have been intricately delineated in black and the base is ornamented in gold.

The LPC has also published "Heads, or the Art of Phrenology", which describes how Phrenology has been developed from the ancient ideas of Aristotle and belief in the Soul, through to Victorian Cranioscopy. It contains numerous illustrations taken from Medieval and Victorian publications, and is beautifully presented in a black & gold semi-hard cover. (8½" x 6½")
