It opens its pages to authors working at the frontiers of social analysis, regardless of discipline. # Biology and Philosophy

Editor

Michael Ruse, University of Guelph, Canada

Associate Editors

Francisco Ayala, University of California, Davis, USA; Robert Haynes, York University, Canada; David Hull, Northwestern University, USA

'...this journal is to be welcomed as a vehicle for serious exchange on the philosophical foundations of biology and the philosophical and conceptual implications of biological work. It is likely to become fairly important in fostering interdisciplinary interaction. It offers both biologists and philosophers a useful vehicle for publication and a reasonable centralized locus for following the interactions between their disparate disciplines.'

Quarterly Review of Biology

'Biology and Philosophy has started well.

'...it will perform a genuine service.

'...this is a journal that no thoughtful biologist" should ignore.'

Nature, Sept. 1987

The past two decades have witnessed fascinating and controversial advances in the biological sciences. One may think, for instance, of methods for analyzing the basic molecular units of heredity; of proposals and clarifications of the appropriate methods of classifying organisms; of exciting new ideas about the nature of the fossil record and their implications for the elucidation of evolutionary mechanisms; and of ways in which the biological study of behavior has been extended, theoretically and experimentally, and of supposed implications for humankind. To add to these internal issues, the outside world has also seen much debate on biology – in the world of education, for instance.

These and other issues have made biology one of the most exhilarating areas of science, and have aroused in biologists and philosophers an awareness that there is a need for metatheoretical analysis, both about the very nature of biology, as well as about its social implications.

Biology and Philosophy is aimed at a broad readership, drawn from both the sciences and the humanities. The journal subscribes to no specific school of biology, nor of philosophy, and publishes work from authors of all persuasions and all disciplines. The editorial board reflects this attitude in its composition and its world-wide membership.

Each issue of Biology and Philosophy carries one or more discussions or comparative reviews, permitting the in-depth study of important works and topics.

Studies in Soviet Thought

Editors

Edward M. Swiderski (Managing Editor); Guido Küng, Institut de l'Europe Orientale, Fribourg, Switzerland; Nikolaus Lobkowitz, University of Munich, FRG

Founded in 1961 by Joseph M. Bocheński, the journal serves as an international medium for the publication of research papers, short notes, comments, reports, critical reviews, discussions, and other writings on Soviet philosophy.

Although the main interest is in modern and recent Soviet thought, the journal does not confine itself to this field and publishes articles dealing with pre-Revolutionary developments. In addition, the journal is useful to philosophers who do not specialize in Soviet studies but wish to be kept informed of philosophical developments inside the Soviet Union and Marxist movements.

ETHICS and JUSTIFICATION

Edited with an Introduction by
Douglas Odegard

Theories of justification for ethical decisions abound, each rejecting the others' claims and promoting their own. It is even controversial whether such theories are possible, or indeed whether they are necessary. The contributors to this volume, all leading moral philosophers, explore these issues in the attempt to find common, and therefore reliable, ground.

Topics discussed include: Justifying a Morality, The Individual, Society and the Environment, Justification and Systematic Foundations, The Diversity of Cases, Coherence and Intuition, Agreement in Ethical Theory.

The Journal of Medicine and Philosophy

Sponsored by the Center for Ethics, Medicine, and Public Issues, a joint project of Baylor College of Medicine, the Institute of Religion, and Rice University, in collaboration with the School of Medicine, University of Connecticut Health Center

Editor

H. Tristram Engelhardt, Jr., Center for Ethics, Medicine, and Public Issues, Baylor College of Medicine, Houston, USA

Associate Editor

Stuart F. Spicker, School of Medicine, University of Connecticut Health Center, Farmington, USA

The Journal of Medicine and Philosophy came into existence in 1976 when the fields of bioethics and the philosophy of medicine were in statu nascendi. It was initially sponsored by the Society for Health and Human Values and sustained primarily by North American readers and authors. But now, over a decade later, bioethics and the philosophy of medicine have become fields of research and teaching around the world. The Journal's associations have grown so that it now has connections with the European Society for Philosophy of Medicine and Health Care and the Japanese Association for Philosophical and Ethical Research in Medicine; the Editorial Advisory Board has taken on an international character. In 1989 The Journal of Medicine and Philosophy expanded to a bimonthly from a quarterly. The need for a scholarly vehicle encompassing the international scope of contemporary research, accommodating the scholar's writing on the subject and covering the topics that are now of daily concern is filled by The Journal of Medicine and Philosophy.

The editors are primarily interested in publishing the work of new Ph.D.'s and students pursuing the Ph.D. degree, but all papers of philosophical interest will be considered.

PPR is now fifty percent longer than in the past. This has made possible some new departures with no decrease in refereed material published. For example, more long reviews of individual books now appear, as well as more long review essays of several books on a single topic. And regularly featured book symposia include the following (already scheduled for publication):

1. Hilary Putnam's Representation and Reality. Précis by the author. Discussants: Ned Block, Paul Churchland, Christopher Peacocke, Richard Rorty, and John Searle. Response by the author.
2. Jonathan Bennett's Events and Their Names. Précis by the author. Discussants: Keith Campbell, Jaegwon Kim, Terry Parsons, Anthony Quinton, and David Sanford. Response by the author.
3. Alasdair MacIntyre's Whose Justice? Which Rationality? Précis by the author. Discussants: Annette Baier, Norman Dahl, and Jerry Schneewind. Response by the author.
4. Shelly Kagan's The Limits of Morality. Précis by the author. Discussants: Dan Brock, Frances Kamm, and Michael Slote. Response by the author.
5. Stephen P. Stich's The Fragmentation of Reason. Précis by the author. Discussants: L. Jonathan Cohen, Alvin Goldman, Gilbert Harman, and William Lycan. Response by the author.
6. Kendall L. Walton's Mimesis as Make-Believe. Précis by the author. Discussants: Noël Carroll, Patrick Maynard, George Wilson, Richard Wollheim, and Nicholas Wolterstorff. Response by the author.

PPR can now typeset directly from disks and from text received electronically. This enables us to publish substantially more material in each issue with no increase in the time from submission to publication, or in the time required for publication of reviews and book symposia.
