

Teaching Civic Engagement Across the Disciplines

APSA is proud to publish Teaching Civic Engagement Across the Disciplines, the second volume in the series. The editors have gathered a diverse group of 38 contributors who approach civic engagement education from multiple disciplines and perspectives. The book defines the terminology of civic engagement education and explores practices, techniques, principles and assessment, making it a practical book for many educators. Several events featuring the book and its authors were held at the Annual Meeting. ■

Book launch and cake for Teaching Civic Engagement Across the Disciplines (APSA, 2017) with co-editors (L to R) Elizabeth Bennion, Indiana University, Alison Rios Millett McCartney, Towson University, Dick Simpson, University of Illinois, Chicago, Elizabeth Matto, Rutgers University.

APSA author Dick W. Simpson, University of Illinois, Chicago, receives the Lifetime Achievement Award of the Political Science Education Section from Elizabeth Bennion, Indiana University.