Journal of northeast asian studies

JOURNAL OF NORTHEAST ASIAN STUDIES explores the social, economic, political, and military developments in contemporary China, Japan, and North and South Korea. The journal provides a special focus on examining internal as well as external factors likely to have a significant impact on these nations, particularly relations with the United States and the Soviet Union. JNAS, published quarterly, is the official publication of the Institute for Sino-Soviet Studies, George Washington University.

Articles of enduring interest already published on:

U.S.-ASIAN RELATIONS • Robert Sutter explores the policy implications of arms sales to Taiwan • Edward A. Olsen argues for modifying U.S.-North Korean policy • Eleanor M. Hadley asks whether the U.S.-Japan trade imbalance is a problem • Hong-koo Lee and Chong-wook Chung look at current U.S.-South Korean relations • Sung-joo Han on South Korea's policy toward the United States.

DOMESTIC POLITICS • Hak-joon Kim examines recent developments in North Korean politics • Parris H. Chang and Hong-yung Lee explore Deng Xiaoping's reform of the Chinese bureaucracy • Young-whan Kihl asks who governs and who benefits in Korea's Fifth Republic.

INTERASIAN POLICIES • Soong-hoom Kil describes the evolution of South Korean policy toward Japan • Byung-joon Ahn examines prospects for North-South Korean relations • Harold C. Hinton on China's interest in the Korean peninsula.

MILITARY AFFAIRS • Naotoshi Sakonjo presents an overview of military security in northeast Asia • Alastair I. Johnston looks at China's nuclear force modernization • Larry A. Nicksch on the role of South Korea in a broader pacific defense • Kim Woodward and Alice A. Davenport investigate the security dimension of China's offshore oil development • Martin E. Weinstein on Japan's defense policy.

SOCIAL DEVELOPMENTS • Yong-duck Jung and Gilbert B. Siegel explore perceptions of distributive justice in Korea • Kuniko Arai examines political education in communist China • Aida K. Tomeh and Charles Hou on Korean sex role attitudes.

Sisters and Strangers
Women in the Shanghai Cotton Mills
1919-1949

Emily Honig. The majority of cotton mill workers in China's largest industrial center prior to 1949 were women, and this book is one of the first to examine their historical experience. The author shows why women in Shanghai rarely participated in the radical labor movement of the 1920's, and traces their gradual politicization in the next two decades to the point that a strike against mill owners in 1948 was led primarily by women. We are also given rich information on women's daily lives both inside and outside the mills, and on the kinds of social relationships they formed with other women to exercise some degree of control over their lives. $37.50

The Workers of Tianjin
1900-1949

Gail Hershatter. Until now the history of the Chinese working class has been covered primarily through accounts of union formation and strikes. This new book creates a history of working people in Tianjin (Tientsin) based on an urban history of the modern city and on vivid case studies of workers in three different sectors—ironworking, transport, and textile manufacture. The author focuses on the uneven physical growth and capitalist development of the city, on working-class culture and consciousness, and on the role workers played in shaping Tianjin's identity as a major port city. The case studies emphasize the roles of women and children in the labor force. $35.00
