

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

MICHAEL ALBERTUS is an assistant professor of political science at the University of Chicago. His research interests include redistribution, political regime transitions and stability, politics under dictatorship, and clientelism. Albertus's most recent work has been published in journals such as British Journal of Political Science, Journal of Conflict Resolution, Comparative Political Studies, Economics and Politics, and Comparative Politics. He is currently working on a manuscript that explores when and why land reform programs are implemented and why they are structured in different ways, with a focus on Latin America.

MARK DANIEL ANDERSON is associate professor of Latin American literatures and cultures at the University of Georgia. He conducts research primarily on Mexican and Brazilian cultural texts dealing with crisis, natural disaster, and eco-critical topics. He is the author of Disaster Writing: The Cultural Politics of Catastrophe in Latin America (2011).

KATHYA ARAUJO (PhD in American studies) is professor at the Universidad Academia de Humanismo Cristiano, Chile. Her main research fields are individuation processes and their relationship with norms. Her most recent books are Habitar lo social: Usos y abusos en la vida cotidiana en el Chile actual (2009), Dignos de su arte: Sujeto y lazo social en el Perú de las primeras décadas del siglo XX (2009), and Desafíos comunes: La sociedad chilena y sus individuos (2012, with Danilo Martuccelli). She has been a fellow of the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation.

LUIZ CARLOS BRESSER-PEREIRA is emeritus professor of the Getúlio Vargas Foundation. He was finance minister (1987) and minister of federal administration (1995–1998) of Brazil. His books include The Theory of Inertial Inflation: The Foundation of Economic Reform in Brazil and Argentina (1987), Economic Reforms in New Democracies: A Social-Democratic Approach (1993, with Adam Przeworski and José María Maravall), Democracy and Public Management Reform: Building the Republican States (2004), and Globalization and Competition: Why Some Emergent Countries Succeed While Others Fall Behind (2010).

JASON DYCK (PhD 2012, University of Toronto) is an assistant professor of history at Trent University Durham, Oshawa, Canada. His research focuses on colonial religion, missionary work, and the craft of sacred history in Spanish America during the baroque period. He is currently completing a transcription of and scholarly introduction to the third volume of Francisco de Florencia's chronicle of the Jesuit province of New Spain.

FABIÁN ECHEGARAY'S (PhD in political science, University of Connecticut) main areas of research relate to political participation, public opinion, and sustainability issues. His work has appeared in International Journal of Public Opinion Research, Ambiente & Sociedade, Opinião Pública, Desarrollo Económico, and Journal of Cleaner Production, among others. He is the author of Economic Crises and Electoral Responses in Latin America (2005). Since 2000, he has been managing director of Market Analysis, a market and opinion research agency based in Brazil.

Latin American Research Review, Vol. 50, No. 2. © 2015 by the Latin American Studies Association.

PATRICIA FORTUNY LORET DE MOLA received a PhD in social anthropology from University College London in 1995. She has been a full-time researcher at the Center of Research and Advanced Studies in Social Anthropology (CIESAS) since 1988, first in Occidente, in Guadalajara, Mexico, and since 2002 at CIESAS Peninsular in Mérida, Mexico. She has published two books on religious minorities from Mexico and coordinated one on religious affiliation and modern values in Guadalajara. She has written numerous articles and chapters in Spanish and English on religion conversion; migration and churches; gender, power, and space; and other related topics.

JAYMIE PATRICIA HEILMAN is an associate professor of Latin American and Caribbean history at the University of Alberta. She is the author of Before the Shining Path: Politics in Rural Ayacucho, 1895–1980 (2010) and is currently working on a life history of the Peruvian indigenous activist Manuel Llamojha Mitma. Her work focuses on rural politics, racism, and twentieth-century Peru.

MAARTEN E. R. G. N. JANSEN is professor of the Faculty of Archaeology, Leiden University, the Netherlands. His research and teaching concern the heritage of indigenous peoples in the Americas. He is the author or coauthor of more than twenty books on Mesoamerican pictorial manuscripts and related visual art as well as on colonial documents in the Mixtec language. At present he directs a research project on Mesoamerican time perception and symbolism, funded by an Advanced Grant of the European Research Council.

DANILO MARTUCELLI is a professor of sociology at the Université Paris–Descartes and researcher at CERLIS-CNRS. His main research fields are sociology of the individual, social theory, and political sociology. His most recent books are La société singulariste (2010), ¿Existen individuos en el Sur? (2010), and Desafíos comunes: Retrato de la sociedad chilena y sus individuos (2012, with Kathya Araujo).

SHANNAN MATTIACE is professor of political science at Allegheny College in Meadville, PA. Her areas of research include social movements, ethnic and cultural politics, Mexican economic history, and migration. She is the author of To See with Two Eyes: Peasant Activism and Indian Autonomy in Chiapas, Mexico and coeditor of Mayan Lives, Mayan Utopias. Her articles have appeared in Journal of Economic History, Mexican Studies/Estudios Mexicanos, Latin American and Caribbean Ethnic Studies, Latin American Politics and Society, Latin American Perspectives, and Journal of Latin American and Caribbean Anthropology. She is the editor of the Mexican politics section of Handbook of Latin American Studies at the Library of Congress.

ENRIQUE MU is department co-chair at Carlow University, Pittsburgh, as well as director of the summer training program for Latin American executives at the University of Pittsburgh's Institute for International Studies in Education. He holds a PhD in business administration from the University of Pittsburgh. His research interests are in the areas of education, technological innovation management, and managerial decision making.

JUNE NASH is Distinguished Professor Emerita in the Department of Anthropology, City University of New York. Her prolific career spans over fifty years of fieldwork and scholarship. She has received a number of awards, including the Conrad Arensburg Award for Ethnological Studies (1992), the American Anthropological Association's Distinguished Service Award (1995), and the Kalman Silvert Award of the Latin American Studies Association (2004). Among her books are Mayan Visions: The Quest for Autonomy in an Age of Globalization (2001); Sex and Class in Latin America (1976, with Helen Safa); Women, Men, and the International Division of Labor (1983, with María P. Fernández-Kelly); He agotado mi vida en las minas (1976), translated as I Spent My Life in the Mines: The Story of Juan Rojas, Bolivian Tin Miner (1992); and Crafts in the World Market: The Impact of Global Exchange on Middle American Artisans (1993).

MILAGROS PEREYRA-ROJAS holds a PhD in management from Case Western Reserve University, where she is currently a research associate. She is currently executive director of the Latin American Studies Association and is a board member for the American Council of Learned Societies' Conference of Administrative Officers for the period 2013–2016. Her research interest is in scholarly knowledge production and dissemination.

HUGO SIR RETAMALES is a sociologist at the University Alberto Hurtado (Chile). He currently serves as external researcher at FLACSO Chile and is coordinator of the research project "Cuerpo, salud y política," in the Núcleo de Sociología del Cuerpo y las Emociones, Universidad de Chile. He has participated in research on immigration, labor markets, gender, health, and the elderly.

OFELIA ROS is a scholar at the Instituto Caro y Cuervo of Colombia and professor at the Universidad Santo Tomás de Aquino. She received her PhD from the University of Michigan in 2010. She has published widely on contemporary Latin American literature and culture from a theoretical perspective that combines critical theory and political subjectivity. She is the author of Lo siniestro se sigue riendo en la literatura argentina (forthcoming 2015). Her current research focuses on Colombian contemporary cultural production at the crossroads of history and politics.

DIEGO SANCHES CORRÊA earned his PhD in political science at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. He is a postdoctoral fellow at the Department of Political Science of the University of São Paulo. His research focuses on the political causes and consequences of income redistribution, with empirical work centered on Latin America.

MARÍA EMILIA TIJOUX (PhD in sociology, Université Paris 8) is a researcher in the Department of Sociology, University of Chile. She currently coordinates the PhD program in the School of Social Sciences and directs the research program Núcleo de Sociología del Cuerpo y las Emociones. Her main research topics are organized around issues of poverty, social exclusion, racism, and new migrations. She is the editor of the journal Actual Marx Intervenciones (Chile).

CHRISTINE J. WADE, associate professor of political science and international studies and curator of the Goldstein Program in Public Affairs at Washington College, is a specialist in the politics of Central America and postwar peace building. She is the coauthor of Understanding Central America: Global Forces, Rebellion and Change

(2014), Nicaragua: Living in the Shadow of the Eagle (5th ed., 2011), and A revolução salvadorenha (2006). She is also the author of publications on the FMLN, peace building, and postwar politics in El Salvador, and on Central American politics. Her book Captured Peace: Elites and Peacebuilding in El Salvador is due for publication in 2015.

LATIN AMERICAN RESEARCH REVIEW

Volume 50 Number 3 2015

VISIONS OF THE AMAZON: WHAT HAS SHIFTED, WHAT PERSISTS, AND WHY THIS MATTERS

Candace Slater

BOLIVIA–EUROPEAN UNION TRADE AGREEMENT: IS IT AN OPTION FOR THE MORALES ADMINISTRATION?

Roberto Telleria and Carlos Ludena

DECENTRALIZATION, THE INCLUSION OF ETHNIC CITIZENS, AND SUPPORT FOR DEMOCRACY IN LATIN AMERICA

Karleen Jones West

LA COMUNICACIÓN INTERÉTNICA EN LAS FRONTERAS INDÍGENAS DEL RÍO DE LA PLATA Y SUR DE CHILE, SIGLO XVIII

Daniel Villar, Juan Francisco Jiménez y Sebastián L. Alioto

DELEGATION, AGENDA CONTROL, AND BUDGET REFORM IN BRAZIL, 1999–2008

Sérgio Praça

INDIVIDUAL-LEVEL DETERMINANTS OF ANTI-AMERICANISM IN CONTEMPORARY LATIN AMERICA

Dinorah Azpuru and Dexter Boniface

POLICY CHOICE, SOCIAL STRUCTURE, AND INTERNATIONAL TOURISM IN BUENOS AIRES, HAVANA, AND RIO DE JANEIRO

Kirk Bowman

CUBA'S LABORANTE: THE WORKER AS REVOLUTIONARY IDENTITY

Marissa L. Ambio

BALLOT STRUCTURE, CANDIDATE RACE, AND VOTE CHOICE IN BRAZIL

Rosario Aguilar, Saul Cunow, Scott Desposato, and Leonardo Barone

CONTRA VIENTO Y MAREA, AQUÍ ESTOY: TERRITORIO E IDENTIDAD EN SAN CRISTÓBAL, MONTES DE MARÍA

Luis Sánchez Ayala y Cindia Arango López

RESEARCH REPORT

CROWDING OUT PRIVATE INVESTMENT IN BOLIVIA: EVIDENCE FOR THE 1988–2010 PERIOD

Antonio Bojanic