

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

RICHARD DANZIG, Associate Professor of Law at Stanford Law School, has received a J.D. from Yale Law School and Ph.D. in history from Oxford University. During 1975-1976, while holding a Prize Fellowship from the Harvard Society of Fellows, his work will concentrate on a study of United States Supreme Court Decision-making during the period 1938-1961.

FORREST DILL was associated with the Center for the Study of Law and Society, University of California, Berkeley (1964-1969), worked at the Center on Administration of Criminal Justice, School of Law, University of California, Davis (1969-1972), and received his Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley, in 1972. He is currently Assistant Professor of Sociology at the State University of New York at Stony Brook.

WILLIAM L. F. FELSTINER is Acting Professor of Law at the University of California at Los Angeles. He teaches courses on law and anthropology, the legal profession and remedies.

DAVID F. GREENBERG, Assistant Professor of Sociology at New York University, received a Ph.D. in theoretical high energy physics from the University of Chicago. His interest in prisons grew out of his involvement in the draft resistance movement. He was one of the authors of Struggle for Justice, was Senior Fellow at the Committee for the Study of Incarceration, has written extensively on questions of criminal justice policy, and is affiliated with the Prisoners Union. He is completing a book on mathematical criminology, and is doing historical research on the development of theories of criminality.

MICHAEL J. LOWY is a field work supervisor in SUNY at Buffalo Law School's Criminal Justice Specialist Program. He was Assistant Professor of Anthropology at the University of Pittsburgh from 1970-1975, and also taught in the Behavioral Science and Law Program at the University of Wisconsin. During the 1973-74 academic year he was a Law and Modernization Post Doctoral Fellow at the Yale Law School. He was awarded a Russell Sage Foundation Law and Social Residency to begin Stanford Law School this fall.

REUEL SHINNAR is Professional of Chemical Engineering at City College, New York. He is known from his publications in such chemical engineering subjects as reactor design, process dynamics and control, fluid dynamics and combustion, and for his work in Operations Research. He received his B.S. from the Technion in Haifa, and his Ph.D. from Columbia.

SHLOMO SHINNAR received his B.A. in Physics from Columbia. He is currently studying for his M.D. and Ph.D. degrees at Albert Einstein College of Medicine.

STEVEN SPITZER is Assistant Professor of Sociology at the University of Pennsylvania. He received his Ph.D. in 1971 from Indiana University. He has contributed to Social Problems and a number of edited collections in the areas of criminology and deviance. His current interest is in deviance and social control and he is working on a book entitled Deviance and Control in American Society to be published by Prentice Hall.