

Contents Volume 9:1 March 1986

Holender, D. Semantic activation without conscious identification in dichotic listening, parafoveal vision, and visual masking: A survey and appraisal		1
Open Peer Commentary
Balota, D. A. Unconscious semantic processing: The pendulum keeps on swinging	23
Bisiach, E. Through the looking-glass and what cognitive psychology found there	24
Bridgeman, B. Theories of visual masking	25
Carr, T. H. & Dagenbach, D. Now you see it, now you don't: Relations between semantic activation and awareness	26
Corteen, R. S. Electrodermal responses to words in an irrelevant message: A partial reappraisal	27
Crowder, R. C. A history of subliminal perception in autobiography	28
Dixon, N. F. On private events and brain events	29
Erdelyi, M. H. Experimental indeterminacies in the dissociation paradigm of subliminal perception	30
Evelt, L. J., Humphreys, G. W. & Quinlan, P. T. Identification, masking, and priming: Clarifying the issues	31
Fischler, I. Knowing and knowing you know: Better methods or better models?	32
Fowler, C. A. An operational definition of conscious awareness must be responsible to subjective experience	33
Inhoff, A. W. Attentional orienting precedes conscious identification	35
Johnston, W. A. Semantic activation, consciousness, and attention	35
Latto, R. & Champion, J. Approaches to consciousness: Psychophysics or philosophy?	36
Lupker, S. J. Conscious identification: Where do you draw the line?	37
Macmillan, N. A. The psychophysics of subliminal perception	38
Marcel, A. J. Consciousness and processing: Choosing and testing a null hypothesis	40
McConkie, G. W. Semantic activation and reading	41
Merikle, P. M. & Cheesman, J. Consciousness is a "subjective" state	42
Morton, J. What do you mean by conscious?	43
Näätänen, R. Processing of the unattended message during selective dichotic listening	43
Navon, D. On determining what is unconscious and what is perception	44
Paap, K. R. The pilfering of awareness and guilt by association	45
Rayner, K. Against semantic preprocessing in parafoveal vision	46
Stanovich, K. E. & Purcell, D. G. Priming without awareness: What was all the fuss about?	47
Underwood, G. Facilitation or inhibition from parafoveal words?	48
Wolford, G. A review of the literature with and without awareness	49
Author's Response
Holender, D. Conceptual, experimental, and theoretical indeterminacies in research on semantic activation without conscious identification		50

Ballard, D. H. Cortical connections and parallel processing: Structure and function 67

Open Peer Commentary
Andersen, R. A. Value, variable, and coarse coding by posterior parietal neurons	90
Baird, J. C. Value encoding of patterns and variable encoding of transformations?	91
Barnden, J. A. Connectionist value units: Some concerns	92
Churchland, P. M. Phase-space representation and coordinate transformation: A general paradigm for neural computation	93
Finkel, L. H. & Reeke, G. N. Jr. What's the connection?	94
Foss, J. Abstract solutions versus neurobiologically plausible problems	95
Gilbert, C. D. Cortical architectures and value unit encoding	96
Grossberg, S. Brain metaphors, theories, and facts	97
Harth, E. Does the brain compute?	98
Hoffman, W. C. Invariant and programmable neuropsychological systems are fibrations	99
Hopfield, J. J. "Grandmother networks" and computational economy	100
Koch, C. What's in the term connectionist ?	100
Landy, M. S. The gap from sensation to cognition	101
Mumford, D. Two tests for the value unit model: Multicell recordings and pointers	102
Pellionisz, A. J. Old dogmas and new axioms in brain theory	103
Sejnowski, T. J. Computational neuroscience	104
Sur, M. What does the cortex do?	105
Tsotsos, J. K. Connectionist computing and neural machinery: Examining the test of "timing"	106
Author's Response
Ballard, D. H. Value units make the right connections		107

Sayre, K. M. Intentionality and information processing: An alternative model for cognitive science 121

Open Peer Commentary

Brown, R., Earle, D. C., & Lea, S. E. G. Not an alternative model for intentionality in vision	138	Leyton, M. The relationship between information theory, statistical mechanics, evolutionary theory and cognitive science	148
Churchland, P. M. Semantic content: In defense of a network approach	139	MacKay, D. M. Intrinsic versus contrived intentionality	149
Daugman, J. G. Communication theory and intentionality	140	Marks, L. E. Cognitive science and the pragmatics of behavior	150
Dennett, D. C. Engineering's baby	141	Morphis, M. A total process approach to perception	150
Dretske, F. I. Stalking intentionality	142	Perlis, D. & Hall, R. Intentionality as internality	151
Ellerman, D. P. Intentionality and information theory	143	Powers, W. T. Intentionality: No mystery	152
Eskew, R. T. Jr. Information is in the eye of the beholder	144	Turvey, M. T. Intentionality: A problem of multiple reference frames, specificational information, and extraordinary boundary conditions on natural law	153
Golden, R. M. On some specific models of intentional behavior	144
Gordon, I. E. Uncertainty about information	146	Author's Response
Heil, J. Intentionality and the explanation of behavior	146	Sayre, K. M. Intentionality and communication theory	155
Kelley, D. Information, causality, and intentionality	147
Lebowitz, M. Semantic information: Inference rules + memory	147

Vining, D. R., Jr. Social versus reproductive success: The central theoretical problem of human sociobiology 167

Open Peer Commentary

Bajema, C. J. Passion for sexual pleasure, the measurement of selection, and prospects for eugenics	187	class differences in fitness in modern industrial societies	198
Barkow, J. H. Central problems of sociobiology	188	Kitcher, P. The trouble with human sociobiology is . . .	201
Caton, H. Sound and shoddy sociobiology	188	Kurland, J. A. Proletarian hominids on the rampage	202
Daly, M. & Wilson, M. A theoretical challenge to a caricature of Darwinism	189	Lynn, R. & Hampson, S. Further evidence for secular increases in intelligence in Britain, Japan, and the United States	203
Dawkins, R. Wealth, polygyny, and reproductive success	190	Macphail, E. M. Fertility, intelligence, and socioeconomic status: No cause for surprise or alarm	204
Eibl-Eibesfeldt, I. Intelligence and selection	191	Neel, J. V. The "eugenic dilemma" revisited	205
Flynn, J. R. Sociobiology and IQ trends over time	192	Retherford, R. D. Demography and sociobiology	205
Fox, R. Fitness by any other name	192	Silverberg, J. & Gray, J. P. What is sociobiology's central dogma?	206
Gaulin, S. J. C. The use and abuse of sociobiology	193	Sternberg, R. J. What is adaptive?	207
Ghiselin, M. T. & Scudo, F. M. The bioeconomics of phenotypic selection	194	Symons, D. Sociobiology and Darwinism	208
Hartung, J. Proximate mechanisms and distal objectives	196	Van Valen, L. M. & Maiorana, V. C. Surrogate resources, cumulative selection, and fertility	209
Hill, J. Success in a dual evolutionary model	196	Weinrich, J. D. Intelligence, reproductive success, and social status: A complicated relationship	209
Irons, W. Social and reproductive success: Useful data but rethink the theory	197	Weiss, K. M. Avarice aforethought and the fundamental premise of sociobiology	210
Kaplan, H. & Hill, K. Sexual strategies and social-		Williams, B. J. Rejecting sociobiological hypotheses	211

Grünbaum, A. Précis of The Foundations of Psychoanalysis: A Philosophical Critique 217

Open Peer Commentary

Caplan, A. With a friend like Professor Grünbaum does psychoanalysis need any enemies?	228	Masling, J. Psychoanalysis, case histories, and experimental data	249
Caws, P. The scaffolding of psychoanalysis	229	Notturmo, M. A. & McHugh, P. R. Is Freudian psychoanalytic theory really falsifiable?	250
Cioffi, F. Did Freud rely on the tally argument to meet the argument from suggestibility?	230	Pagnini, A. The persistence of the "exegetical myth"	252
Eagle, M. N. Psychoanalysis as hermeneutics	231	Pollock, G. H. Is there a "two-cultures" model for psychoanalysis?	253
Edelson, M. The evidential value of the psychoanalyst's clinical data	232	Popper, K. Predicting overt behavior versus predicting hidden states	254
Erdelyi, M. H. Psychoanalysis has a wider scope than the retrospective discovery of etiologies	234	Reiser, M. F. Grünbaum's critique of clinical psychoanalytic evidence: A sheep in wolf's clothing?	255
Erwin, E. Defending Freudianism	235	Ruse, M. Grünbaum on psychoanalysis: Where do we go from here?	256
Eysenck, H. J. Failure of treatment—failure of theory?	236	Savodnik, I. Some gaps in Grünbaum's critique of psychoanalysis	257
Farrell, B. A. The probative value of the clinical data of psychoanalysis	236	Shevrin, H. An argument for the evidential standing of psychoanalytic data	257
Fine, A. & Forbes, M. Grünbaum on Freud: Three grounds for dissent	237	Spence, D. P. Are free associations necessarily contaminated?	259
Flanagan, O. J., Jr. Psychoanalysis as a social activity	238	Storr, A. Human understanding and scientific validation	259
Gauld, A. & Shotter, J. Warranting interpretations	239	Strupp, H. H. Transference: One of Freud's basic discoveries	260
Greenberg, R. P. The case against Freud's cases	240	Suppe, F. Grünbaum, homosexuality, and contemporary psychoanalysis	261
Hobson, J. A. Repressed infantile wishes as the instigators of all dreams	241	Von Eckardt, B. Grünbaum's challenge to Freud's logic of argumentation: A reconstruction and an addendum	262
Holt, R. R. Some reflections on testing psychoanalytic hypotheses	242	Wachtel, P. L. Early Freud, late Freud, conflict and intentionality	263
Kächele, H. Validating psychoanalysis: What methods for what task?	244	Wax, M. L. Psychoanalysis: Conventional wisdom, self knowledge, or inexact science	264
Klerman, G. L. The scientific tasks confronting psychoanalysis	245	Woolfolk, R. L. Hermeneutics and psychoanalysis	265
Kline, P. Grünbaum's philosophical critique of psychoanalysis: Or what I don't know isn't knowledge	245
Leibin, V. Psychoanalysis: Science or hermeneutics?	246	Author's Response
Luborsky, L. Evidence to lessen Professor Grünbaum's concern about Freud's clinical inference method	247	Grünbaum, A. Is Freud's theory well-founded?	266
Marmor, J. The question of causality	249

Engel, B. T. An essay on the circulation as behavior 285

Open Peer Commentary

Bergel, D. H. Cardiovascular behaviour: Where does it take us?	295	the cardiovascular system is circumstantial	301
Billman, G. E. Behavioral stress and myocardial ischemia: An example of conditional response modification	295	Roitblat, H. L. On the circulation as cognition	302
Brener, J. The circulation, behavior, and striate muscular activity	296	Sandman, C. A. Circulation as consciousness	302
Corley, K. C. Extension of proposed concepts of cardiovascular behavior from normal to abnormal function	297	Sokolov, E. N. Vascular components of the orienting and defensive reflexes	304
Del Bo, A. & Zanchetti, A. Central command and reflex regulation: Cardiovascular patterns during behavior	297	Wolf, S. Circulatory behavior: Historical perspective and projections for the future	304
Jennings, J. R. Is circulation a conditional operant or has a behaviorist discovered cognitive structures?	298	Wurster, R. D. Program control of circulatory behavior	305
Meehan, J. P. Cardiovascular adjustments are a part of behavior	299	Yellin, A. M. Control of autonomic system-mediated behaviors: Exploring the limits	305
Natelson, B. H. The reflex remains	299	Žemaitytė, D. M. Conditionality of heart rate responses in healthy subjects and patients with ischemic heart disease	306
Roberts, L. E. Evidence for instrumental plasticity in
		Author's Response
		Engel, B. T. If it looks like a duck, walks like a duck, and quacks like a duck, it is a duck: Neurally mediated responses of the circulation are behavior.	307

Soubrié, P. Reconciling the role of central serotonin neurons in human and animal behavior 319

Open Peer Commentary

Azmitia, E. C. & Whitaker-Azmitia, P. M. Searching for an ill-defined brain function results in an uneasy reconciliation 335

Barratt, E. S. & Pritchard, W. S. Personality traits and neurotransmitters: Complexity vis-à-vis complexity 336

Commissaris, R. L. Benzodiazepines, serotonin, and conflict behavior 336

Deakin, J. F. W. Multiple 5-HT systems and multiple punishment processes 337

Geyer, M. A. The role of serotonin in behavior: An unfulfilled promise 338

Graeff, F. G. 5-Hydroxytryptamine, aversion, and anxiety 339

Karli, P. Serotonin and aggression: What kind of relationship? 340

Panksepp, J. & Cox, J. F. An overdue burial for the serotonin theory of anxiety 340

Pellow, S. Is there a role for serotonin in anxiety? 341

Raleigh, M. J. Serotonin, simians, and social setting 342

Schalling, D. The involvement of serotonergic mechanisms in anxiety and impulsivity in humans 343

Sokolov, E. N. Modulating function of central serotonin neurons 344

Solomon, P. R. Strategies for studying brain-behavior relationships 344

Valzelli, L. Controlling a neuron bomb 345

Vanderwolf, C. H. Is serotonin related to inhibition or generation and control of motor activity? 346

Wirtshafter, D. & Asin, K. E. Serotonin depletion and inhibition: Running the rat race without any brakes? 347

Zuckerman, M. Serotonin, impulsivity, and emotionality 348

Author's Response

Soubrié, P. A lonesome Français in serotonin country 349

Continuing Commentary

On Dinsmoor, J. A. Observing and conditioned reinforcement. BBS 6:693–728. 365

Daly, H. B. Dinsmoor's selective observing hypothesis probably cannot account for a preference for unpredictable rewards: DMOD can 365

Furedy, J. J. & Biederman, G. B. Rationalist versus empirical approaches to observing and conditioned reinforcement: The (so-called) preference-for-signaled-shock phenomenon 367

Author's Response

Dinsmoor, J. A. On preference for unsignaled shocks and for unpredictable rewards 368

Contents Volume 9:3 September 1986

Hobson, J. A., Lydic, R. & Baghdoyan, H. A. Evolving concepts of sleep cycle generation: From brain centers to neuronal populations 371

Open Peer Commentary

Antrobus, J. Rapid eye movements and the cerebellum 400

Borbély, A. A. Sleep homeostasis 401

Cespuglio, R. Relationships between pontogeniculooccipital waves and ocular movements 401

Daan, S., Beersma, D. G. M. & Dijk, D. J. Sleep cycle or REM sleep generator? 402

Elazar, Z. Reciprocal interactions in the brain stem, REM sleep, and the generation of generalized convulsions 403

Fishbein, W. & Bright, P. F. Revising sleep cycle theory? 404

Foote, S. L. Sleep cycle generation: Turning on, turning off, and tuning out 405

Freedman, R. Sleep cycle generation: Testing the new hypotheses 406

Greenberg, R. Modeling sleep: We need all the perspectives we can get! 406

Haefely, W. Wet physiology of REM sleep generation 407

Henn, V. The elusive sleep cycle generator 408

Henriksen, S. J. Doubt and certainty in the neurophysiology of state 408

Jasper, H. H. The biological purpose of sleep may make multiple distributed reciprocal systems meaningful 409

Jones, B. E. The need for a new model of sleep cycle generation 409

Kawamura, H. Back to the hypothalamus: A crucial road for sleep research 411

Kilduff, T. S. & Guilleminault, C. Reciprocal interaction revisited 411

Krnjević, K. Transmitters and REM sleep 412

Mendelson, W. B. The reciprocal-interaction model of sleep: A look at a vigorous ten-year-old 412

Monti, J. M. Are cholinergic, noradrenergic, and serotonergic neurons sufficient for understanding REM sleep control?	413	Siegel, J. M. & McGinty, D. J. Location of the systems generating REM sleep: Lateral versus medial pons	420
Morgane, P. J. When is a "center" not a "center"? When it's "anatomically distributed": Prospects for a "diffuse REM center" ("generator")	414	Steriade, M. State control: Changing tools and language	421
Mori, S. & Ohta, Y. Proposed model of postural atonia in a decerebrate cat	415	Vanderwolf, C. H. Ascending cholinergic and serotonergic control of the electrocorticogram: Do I see a ghost?	423
Normanton, J. R. Vasotocin: Neurohumoral control of the reciprocal-interaction model?	416	van Dongen, P. A. M. Reciprocal interaction in sleep cycle control: Description, yes; explanation, no	424
Sakai, K. On the significance of the revised reciprocal-interaction model	417	Vertes, R. P. A new role for FTG neurons?	425
Scheibel, A. B. Is there a choice in "Hobson's choice"?	418	Author's Response
Shiromani, P. J. & Gillin J. C. The REM generator: Here, there, and everywhere?	419	Hobson, J. A., Lydic, R. & Baghdoyan, H. A. When is a reflex not a reflex? The riddle of behavioral-state control	426

Spanos, Nicholas P. Hypnotic behavior: A social-psychological interpretation of amnesia, analgesia, and "trance logic" 449

Open Peer Commentary

Beahrs, J. O. The "special-process" controversy: What is at issue?	467	Rosenthal, T. L. Hypnotic phenomena: Who really sees the emperor's new clothes?	481
Bowers, K. S. & Davidson, T. M. On the importance of individual differences in hypnotic ability	468	Sabini, J. & Kossman, D. A. What grandma thinks about hypnosis	481
Bowers, P. G. Understanding reports of nonvolition	469	Saint Jean, R. Hypnosis: Artichoke or onion?	482
Brody, N. Cognitively induced analgesia and semantic dissociation	470	Sheehan, P. W. Theories of hypnosis—useful or necessary paths to truth?	483
Edmonston, W. E., Jr. Hypnosis and social suggestibility	470	Spiegel, D. Painstaking reminders of forgotten trance logic	484
Evans, F. J. Hypnosis and behavioral compliance: Is the cup half-empty or half-full?	471	Turk, D. C. & Rudy, T. E. Hypnotic behavior dissected or . . . pulling the wings off of butterflies	485
Graham, K. R. Explaining "virtuoso" hypnotic performance: Social psychology or experiential skill?	473	Underwood, G. Using simulations to disprove hypnotic amnesia? Forget it	485
Kihlstrom, J. F. Strong inferences about hypnosis	474	Wagstaff, G. F. State versus nonstate paradigms of hypnosis: A real or a false dichotomy?	486
Kirsch, I. Role playing versus response expectancy as explanations of hypnotic behavior	475	Weinstein, E. A. Attentional capacities have neurological basis	487
Naish, P. L. N. Hypnosis: Towards a rational explanation of irrational behaviour	476	Editorial commentary	488
Orne, M. T., Dinges, D. F. & Orne, E. C. Hypnotic experience: A cognitive social-psychological reality	477	Author's Response
Perry, C. & Laurence, J.-R. Social and psychological influences on hypnotic behavior	478	Spanos, N. P. More on the social psychology of hypnotic responding	489
Rosenthal, R. Nonsignificant relationships as scientific evidence	479

Hoffman, Ralph E. Verbal hallucinations and language production processes in schizophrenia 503

Open Peer Commentary

Akins, K. A. & Dennett, D. C. Who may I say is calling?	517	Gordon, R. M. Teleology and agency in speech production	525
Allen, H. A three-component analysis of Hoffman's model of verbal hallucinations	518	Harley, T. A. Speech errors and hallucinations in schizophrenia – no difference?	525
Alpert, M. Language process and hallucination phenomenology	518	Harrow, M., Marengo, J. T. & Ragin, A. Verbal hallucinations and speech disorganization in schizophrenia: A further look at the evidence	526
Bentall, R. P. & Slade, P. D. Verbal hallucinations, unintendedness, and the validity of the schizophrenia diagnosis	519	Jaynes, J. Hearing voices and the bicameral mind	526
Brand, M. Intended versus intentional action	520	Junginger, J. Distinctiveness, unintendedness, location, and nonself attribution of verbal hallucinations	527
Deese, J. Reality and control	521	Lehnert, W. G. Lexical access and discourse planning: Bottom-up interference or top-down control troubles?	528
Faber, R. The diversity of the schizophrenias	522	Marks, D. F. Intentionality and autonomy of verbal imagery in altered states of consciousness	529
Flor-Henry, P. Auditory hallucinations, inner speech, and the dominant hemisphere	523	Posey, T. B. Verbal hallucinations also occur in normals	530
Gjerde, P. F. Arousal and the disruption of language production processes in schizophrenia	524

Reed, G. F. When is an image hallucinatory?	530	Zivin, G. Image or neural coding of inner speech and agency?	534
Rund, B. R. Verbal hallucinations and information processing	531
Schwartz, S. Hallucination, rationalization, and response set	532	Author's Response
Spanos, N. P. Hallucinations and contextually generated interpretations	533	Hoffman, Ralph E. What can schizophrenic "voices" tell us?	535

Continuing Commentary 549

On Stabler, E. P., Jr. (1983) How are grammars represented? BBS 6:391–421. 549

Harvey, R. J. Language processing and computer programs	549	Author's Response
		Stabler, E. P., Jr. Computational models of language processing	550

On Broadbent, D. E. (1984) The Maltese cross: A new simplistic model for memory. BBS 7:55–94. 552

Doyle, A. J. R. Putting the Maltese cross into context	552	Author's Response
Jones, G. V. Organization of long-term and working memory stores	552	Broadbent, D. E. The computation of control	553

On Lamb, M. E., Thompson, R. A., Gardner, W. P., Charnov, E. L., and Estes, D. (1984) Security of infantile attachment as assessed in the "strange situation": Its study and biological interpretation. BBS 7:127–171. 555

Connell, J. P. The development and component processes of the attachment system: Some suggestions for their rediscovery	555	Author's Response
Ford, M. E. Attachment as a motivational construct: I've seen these patterns before. . . .	556	Lamb, M. E., Thompson, R. A., Gardner W. P., and Charnov, E. L. Convergent approaches to understanding strange situation behavior	559
Van IJzendoorn, M. H. The cross-cultural validity of the strange situation from a Vygotskian perspective	558

On Bickerton, D. The language bioprogram hypothesis. BBS 7:173–221. 561

Berwick, R. C. Grammar growth and parameter setting: Computation and creoles	562	Author's Response
McCarthy, J. J. Bickerton's creole cooking: Where's the beef?	563	Bickerton, D. "Grammar growth"—what does it really mean?	564

On Tulving E. (1984) Précis of Elements of episodic memory. BBS 7:223–268. 566

Crowder, R. G. Remembering experiences and the experience of remembering	566	Spear, N. E. Conscious constraints on episodic memory	571
Kinsbourne, M. Systematizing cognitive psychology	567
Lewis, R. S. Variation on a theme: Are the elements of episodic memory dissociable?	567	Author's Response
Shoben, E. J., and Ross, B. H. The crucial role of dissociations	568	Tulving, E. Episodic and semantic memory: Where should we go from here?	573
Šipoš, I., and Plichtová, J. Dichotomy: Strict or fuzzy	570

On Sternberg, R. J. (1984) Toward a triarchic theory of human intelligence. BBS 7:269–315. 577

Biela, A. Toward a synthetic approach to intelligence	577	Author's Response
Richardson, K. Theory? Or tools for social selection?	578	Sternberg, R. J. Alternatives to the triarchic theory of intelligence	581
Spitz, H. H. Ghosts of the homunculus and of Sigmund Freud	580

Contents Volume 9:4 December 1986

Berkinblit, M. B., Feldman, A. G., & Fukson, O. I. Adaptability of innate motor patterns and motor control mechanisms 585

Open Peer Commentary

Agarwal, G. C. & Gottlieb, G. L. Complexity in control of movements	599
Alexander, R. McN. Do legs have surplus degrees of freedom?	600
Capaday, C. & Stein, R. B. Variations of reflex parameters and their implications for the control of movements	600
Chapple, W. D. The diversity of variability	602
Enoka, R. M. Are posture and movement different expressions of the same mechanism?	602
Evoy, W. H. Is anything fixed in an action pattern?	603
Fentress, J. C. Organizational polarities and contextual controls in integrated movement	604
Gielen, C. & Houk, J. C. Simple changes in reflex threshold cannot explain all aspects of rapid voluntary movements	605
Golani, I. What are the building blocks of the frog's wiping reflex?	607
Gottlieb, G. L. & Agarwal, G. C. The invariant characteristic isn't	608
Hasan, Z. Do subprograms for movement always seek equilibrium?	609
Inbar, G. F. Adaptation and mechanical impedance regulation in the control of movements	610
Ito, M. How are multiple central commands integrated for voluntary movement control?	610
Jander, R. On the conceptual integration of ethology and neurophysiology	611
Latash, M. L. Coordination, grammar, and spasticity	612
Lee, W. E. Do innate motor programs simplify motor control?	612

Loeb, G. E. Exploring the limits of servo control	613
MacKay, W. A. Propulsive torques and adaptive reflexes	614
Matthews, P. B. C. Are we asking too much of the stretch reflex?	614
Munhall, K. G. Motor equivalence and goal descriptors	615
Neilson, P. D. Do the α and λ models adequately describe reflex behavior in man?	616
Nichols, T. R. Reciprocal reflex action and adaptive gain control in the context of the equilibrium-point hypothesis	617
Ostry, D. J. & Wilkinson, F. E. Can voluntary movement be understood on the basis of reflex organization?	618
Partridge, L. D. Frogs solve Bernstein's problem	619
Reed, E. S. Motor variability but functional specificity: Demise of the concept of motor commands	620
Roberts, T. D. M. Implications of aiming	622
Schmidt, R. A. Controlling the temporal structure of limb movements	623
Turvey, M. T. Beyond anatomical specificity	624
Windhorst, U. On the hierarchy of "reflexes"	625

Authors' Response

Berkinblit, M. B., Feldman, A. G., & Fukson, O. I. In search of the theoretical basis of motor control	626
--	-----

Schank, R. C., Collins, G. C. & Hunter, L. E. Transcending inductive category formation in learning 639

Open Peer Commentary

Anderson, J. R. Category learning: Things aren't so black and white	651
Barsalou, L. W. Are there static category representations in long-term memory?	651
Campbell, R. L. & Kellogg, W. A. Toward a cognitive science of category learning	652
Cortner, J. E. Relevant features and statistical models of generalization	653
Dietterich, T. G. Induction: Weak but essential	654
Glymour, C. Complementing explanation with induction	655
Hanson, S. J. Transcending "transcending. . ."	656
Kelly, K. T. Clarity, generality, and efficiency in models of learning: Wringing the MOP	657
Kirsh, D. Second-generation AI theories of learning	658
Kyburg, H. E., Jr. Induction and probability	660
Landau, B. New failures to learn	660
Langley, P. Induction and explanation: Complementary models of learning	661
Lebowitz, M. When explanation is too hard (or understanding hijacking for novices)	662
Millikan, R. G. Of what use categories?	663

Murphy, G. L. The psychology of category learning: Current status and future prospect	664
Pastore, R. E. & Payne D. G. Approaches, assumptions, and goals in modeling cognitive behavior	665
Shimp, C. P. Theory-laden concepts: Great, but what is the next step?	666
Smith, E. E. Category differences/automaticity	667
Sperber, D. Salvaging parts of the "classical theory" of categorization	668
Thagard, P. The pragmatics of induction	668
Tolliver, J. T. Rejecting induction: Using Occam's Razor too soon	669
Wanner, E. The hard questions about noninductive learning remain unanswered	670
Wilks, Y. Are there really two types of learning?	671

Editorial Commentary 671

Authors' Response

Schank, R. C., Collins, G. C. & Hunter, L. E. The learning of function and the function of learning	672
---	-----

Open Peer Commentary

- | | | | |
|---|-----|---|-----|
| Baer, D. M. There's reconstruction, and there's behavior control | 699 | Marr, M. J. The pragmatics of survival and the nobility of defeat | 709 |
| Branch, M. N. Why behaviorism won't die: The cognitivist's "musts" are only "may be's" | 700 | Marshall, J. C. Is behaviorism under stimulus control? | 710 |
| Catania, A. C. Viewing behaviorism selectively | 701 | Marx, M. H. Neglect of psychology's silent majority makes a molehill out of a mountain: There is more to behaviorism than Hull and Skinner | 710 |
| Dinsmoor, J. A. Behaviorism and the education of psychologists | 702 | Rachlin, H. Temporal molarity in behavior | 711 |
| Epstein, R. Behaviorism as the praxist views it | 702 | Rozeboom, W. W. Average behaviorism is unedifying | 712 |
| Eysenck, H. J. Genetic factors in behaviour: The return of the repressed | 703 | Schnaitter, R. The gentrification of behaviorism | 714 |
| Graham, G. First-person behaviorism | 704 | Shimp, C. P. "Suspicion," "fear," "contamination," "great dangers," and behavioral fictions | 715 |
| Hamlyn D. W. "Higher criticism" of behaviorism | 705 | Skinner, B. F. Is it behaviorism? | 716 |
| Hineline, P. N. Rebuilding behaviorism: Too many relatives on the construction site? | 706 | | |
| Hocutt, M. Zuriff on observability | 706 | | |
| Kendler, H. H. Zuriff's counterrevolution | 707 | Author's Response | |
| Krasner, L. The reconstruction of a conceptual reconstruction | 708 | Zuriff, G. E. Conceptual reconstruction: A reconstruction | 716 |

Continuing Commentary

- | | | | |
|---|-----|--|-----|
| On Kupfermann, I. and Weiss, K. R. (1978) The command neuron concept. BBS 1:3–39. | 725 | | |
| Eaton, R. C., Wieland, C. M., and DiDomenico, R. Is the Mauthner cell a Kupfermann & Weiss command neuron? | 725 | Miall, R. C. Simple or complex systems? | 734 |
| Gillette, R. Command neurons? Fap! | 727 | Smock, T. and Arch, S. What commands egg laying in Aplysia ? | 734 |
| Hackett, J. T. and Greenfield, L. J. The behavioral role of the Mauthner neuron impulse | 729 | Weeks, J. G. The command neuron concept: Good in theory, difficult to justify in practice | 735 |
| Hoy, R. R. Do K & W criteria define only command neurons? | 730 | | |
| Kien, J. From command fibres to command systems to consensus. Are these labels really useful anymore? | 732 | Authors' Response | |
| Larimer, J. L., Jellies, J., and Moore D. The crayfish position on command neurons | 733 | Kupfermann, I. and Weiss, K. R. Command performance | 736 |

- | | | | |
|--|-----|--|--|
| On Wilensky, R. (1983) Story grammars versus story points. BBS 6:579–623. | 739 | | |
| Garnham, A. A theory of stories? | 739 | | |

On Maynard Smith, J. (1984) Game theory and the evolution of behaviour. BBS 7:95–125. 740

- | | | | |
|---|-----|---|-----|
| Archer, J. Game theoretic models and respect for ownership | 740 | Author's Response | |
| Zahavi, A. Reliability in signalling motivation | 741 | Maynard Smith, J. Ownership and honesty in competitive interaction | 742 |

On Zuckerman, M. (1984) Sensation seeking: A comparative approach to a human trait. BBS 7:413–71. 744

- | | | | |
|--|-----|--|-----|
| Baker, A. H. and Kostin, I. W. Kinesthetic aftereffects and evoked potentials constitute parallel measures of augmenting-reducing | 744 | Buchsbaum, M. S. Augmentation/reduction update | 748 |
| Connolly, J. F. Evoked potential augmenting-reducing: A weak link in the biology–personality chain | 746 | Author's Response | |
| Mishara, B. L. The myth of kinesthetic aftereffect's nonreliability | 747 | Zuckerman, M. Sensation seeking and augmenting-reducing: Evoked potentials and/or kinesthetic figural aftereffects? | 749 |

On Rachlin, H. (1985) Pain and behavior. BBS 8:43–88.		754
Prkachin, K. M. Pain behaviour is not unitary	754	Author's Response
		Rachlin, H. Is it possible that pain is one thing? 755
 On Baker, M. C. and Cunningham, M. A. The biology of bird-song dialects. QLBBS 8:85–133.		 756
Pepperberg, I. M. Sensitive periods, social interaction, and song acquisition: The dialectics of dialects?	756	Authors' Response
		Baker, M. C. and Cunningham, M. A. Song learning and dialect: More experiments needed 757
 On Ader, R. and Cohen, N. CNS–immune system interactions: Conditioning phenomena. BBS 8:379–94.		 758
Kelley, K. W. and Dantzer, R. Is conditioned immunosuppression truly conditioned?	758	Authors' Response
		Ader, R. and Cohen N. Truly, conditioned responses are indeed conditioned 760