As more and more foreign legal information is available in both print and electronic forms, researchers and librarians alike increasingly need expert assistance to locate and identify the correct information. In a cooperative effort to equip and educate the next generation of law librarians with instruction on foreign legal systems and legal research in foreign, comparative and international law, the American Association of Law Libraries (AALL) and Oceana Publications Inc. have concluded three in a series of five co-sponsored Institutes. Texts from each Institute are being co-published by the AALL and Oceana. This series is an essential for anyone building or completing an international collection of legal materials, or who needs source information or expert guidance on research methods and techniques. Introduction to Foreign Legal Systems (Winter '93), the first Institute's publication, is being met with critical acclaim by law librarians nationwide. Look for the forthcoming publications from the second and third Research Institutes: Introduction to International Organizations (Summer '93), available May 1995, and Transnational Legal Transactions (Summer '94), available July 1995, and mark your calendar for the fourth Research Institute which will focus its attention on international taxation and business, to be held July 1995 in Philadelphia.
