

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

BARBARA E. BAUM at the time of the research was a masters candidate and graduate teaching assistant in the department of sociology at the University of Missouri — Columbia. Her major interests include the social consequences of drug use.

GREGORY CASEY is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Missouri — Columbia. His current research centers on popular perceptions of judicial rulings and dimensions of support for the Supreme Court.

MICHAEL COUZENS is a second year student at the law school, University of California, Berkeley. His review essay on the Final Report of the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence appeared in Law & Society Review (May, 1971): "Reflections on the Study of Violence." As a research assistant at the Brookings Institution he was collaborator for Herbert Kaufman's Administrative Feedback: Monitoring Subordinates' Behavior (Brookings, 1973).

JOHN F. GALLIHER is Associate Professor of Sociology at the University of Missouri — Columbia. Aside from an interest in the social bases of criminal laws, he has written on the ethical issues involved in social science research. His articles have appeared in several journals, including The American Sociologist and Social Problems.

JOHN HAGAN is completing his Doctorate at the University of Alberta and is Director of the Alberta Criminal Justice Project. He received his B.A. from the University of Illinois, M.A. from the University of Alberta, and has been a Fellow at the Institute in Law and Behavioral Science at the University of Wisconsin. Recent articles include "Labelling and Deviance: A Case Study in the 'Sociology of the Interesting,'" Social Problems; "Conceptual Deficiencies of an Interactionist Perspective in Deviance," Criminology; "The Labelling Perspective, The Delinquent, and the Police," Canadian Journal of Criminology and Corrections. Current interests include the application of multivariate techniques in criminal justice research.

JAMES L. McCARTNEY is Associate Professor of Sociology at the University of Missouri — Columbia, and is Editor of Sociological Quarterly. Aside from his interest in deviance theory, he is doing research on criteria used by reviewers in evaluating manuscripts. He has published articles in The American Sociologist and Social Problems.

DAVID NEUBAUER is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of New Orleans. His special interests are urban trial courts and judicial process. Criminal Justice in Middle America, a case study of the administration of criminal justice from the time a suspect is taken to the police station until sentencing, was recently published by General Learning Press. He is currently researching variations in criminal justice policy between communities, using aggregate data from Illinois counties. A study (with Tom Henderson) of the affects of police professionalism upon arrest behavior is also in progress.

DAVID SEIDMAN is a Lecturer in Politics at Princeton University. In 1972 he was a Congressional Fellow with the U. S. Senate Subcommittee to Investigate Juvenile Delinquency. He is currently completing a doctoral dissertation on the phenomenon of private arming in the United States in the 1960's.

CRAIG WANNER is Instructor in Political Science at Jersey City State College. He is completing his dissertation, entitled The Public Ordering of Private Relations: Civil Litigation in Urban Trial Courts, at the Johns Hopkins University. His interests are judicial process and empirical methodology.