MONETARY TRENDS IN THE UNITED STATES AND THE UNITED KINGDOM

Their Relation to Income, Prices, and Interest Rates, 1867-1975

Milton Friedman and Anna J. Schwartz

"The authors have not economized on effort; all nooks and crannies of the data are explored. It is that rarity in economics — a true work of scholarship. . . . Monetary Trends is very much in the distinguished National Bureau tradition of pure research on applied economic issues."

— Thomas Mayer, Journal of Economic Literature

THE RISE AND FALL OF ECONOMIC GROWTH

A Study in Contemporary Thought

H. W. Arndt

This introduction to the debate on economic growth traces the concept's history and public policy implementation since World War II. Arndt sets out the principal arguments for economic growth as an important goal of national policy and shows how actual growth between 1945 and 1965, with its attendant problems, has forced us to reassess the kind of growth desirable. "Brief, well-written, concise, and learned." — Mark Perlman, Journal of Economic Literature $6.95 168 pages

AMERICAN WELFARE CAPITALISM, 1880-1940

Stuart D. Brandes

Brandes reassesses the industrial relations programs widely adopted by American businessmen as an antidote to labor unrest. Seeking to counteract union growth, prevent strikes, and improve efficiency, employers set up new services in housing, education, religion, recreation, profit sharing, medical care, and social work. Weaving colorful examples and quotations into his extensive research, Brandes traces the advent, decline, and impact of this important movement on American life. $7.95 220 pages

Technology and Agricultural Development in Pre-War Japan

Penelope Francks

The first micro-economic study of the development of Japanese agriculture, this book focuses on the technical and economic change in agriculture that occurred in the Saga Plain in Kyushu from 1850 to 1940.

It not only gives a picture of the evolution of rural life in all of pre-war Japan but also provides a Japanese example of the successful resolution of some of the issues of concern to present-day development economists. . $30.00

Money and Power in Fifteenth-Century France

Manufacture in Town and Country Before the Factory

MAXINE BERG, PAT HUDSON, and MICHAEL SONENSCHER, Editors

A collection of essays exploring the internal organization of production before the development of the factory system: how goods were made, how work was organized, and how artisans and laborers perceived and carried out their work. The essays demonstrate the central place of the custom and culture of the work community, whose dynamic was founded as much on questions of credit and debt, perquisites and embezzlement, social hierarchies and power, as on the movement of wages and prices. $39.50

Russian National Income, 1855–1913

PAUL R. GREGORY

This book estimates the growth of the Tsarist economy during the "industrialization era" of 1855 to 1913 and compares its performance with that of Soviet Russia during the plan era and with those of other industrialized countries during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. $29.95

Bread and Salt

A Social and Economic History of Food and Drink in Russia

R.E.F. SMITH and DAVID CHRISTIAN

In Bread and Salt—a literal translation of the Russian word for hospitality—the authors discuss the social and economic implications of eating and drinking in Russia in the thousand years before 1900. They approach eating and drinking as social activities which involve the economics of production, storage, and distribution of foodstuffs and which therefore attract both social controls and state taxation. $59.50

Land and Society in Golden Age Castile

DAVID E. VASSBERG

Drawing on a wide range of archival sources including the most recent research, David Vassberg examines the various forms of landownership in rural Castile during the sixteenth century: public, ecclesiastical, noble, urban middle-class, and peasant. He discusses the changes in landownership and agriculture that occurred during this period, and analyzes the economic decline of Spain from an agricultural perspective. $47.50
