Liquid Life

Abortion and Buddhism in Japan

William R. LaFleur

Why would a country strongly influenced by Buddhism's reverence for life allow legalized, widely used abortion? In this provocative investigation, William LaFleur examines abortion as a window on the culture and ethics of Japan. At the same time he explores how the Japanese resolve their conflicting emotions privately and avoid the pro-life/pro-choice politics that sharply divide Americans.

"One can learn a great deal about Japanese Buddhism, thought, and psychology from this book, as well as gain insight into the intellectual issues of the abortion debate."—Patricia G. Steinhoff

"The author writes in a style accessible to any reader interested in Japanese religion and thought, abortion, and ethics."—Thomas P. Kasulis

Japan through American Eyes

The Journal of Francis Hall, Kanagawa and Yokohama,

1859-1866

Edited by F. G. Noteheffer

In this journal, Francis Hall, a journalist and America's leading business pioneer in nineteenth-century Japan, offers a remarkable view of the period leading to the Meiji Restoration. Privately preserved for more than a hundred years, this previously unpublished document shows Hall to have been an astute observer of Japanese life at the end of the Tokugawa Shogunate.

Hall reveals a private side of life through the eyes of a reporter with a keen eye for detail. The publication of his journal, along with many of the articles he wrote for the American press, furnishes us with an insightful and sensitive portrayal of Japan on the eve of modernity.

The Presence of Śiva

Stella Kramrisch

One of the three great gods of Hinduism, Śiva is a living god. The most sacred and most ancient book of India, the R̥g Veda, evokes his presence in its hymns; Vedic myths, rituals, and even astronomy testify to his existence from the dawn of time. In a lively meditation on Śiva, based on original Sanskrit texts, Stella Kramrisch ponders the metaphysics and myths of the god from the Vedas and the Puranas.

By retelling and interweaving the many myths that keep Śiva alive in India today, Kramrisch reveals the paradoxes in Śiva's nature and thus in the nature of consciousness itself.

"Evocation of the presence of Shiva in the mind of the reader, beyond analysis of the aspects of the god, is achieved by gradually delving deeper into the myths, weaving their many strands together until the reader experiences the unparalleled richness of this deity."—Parabola

Myths and Symbols in Indian Art and Civilization

Heinrich Zimmer

Edited by Joseph Campbell

This was the first book by Heinrich Zimmer to appear in English. It interprets for Westerners the key motifs of India's legend, myth, and folklore, taken directly from the Sanskrit and illustrated with photographs of Indian art. It seeks to make the profound Hindu and Buddhist intuitions of the riddles of life and death recognizable not merely as Oriental but as universal elements of human experience.

"The myths of India, emerging from the collective unconscious, are fashioned with such subtlety of thought that careless handling or even restatement in a foreign idiom destroys their essence. Zimmer moves among them unhurriedly, with a respect that amounts to devotion. Gradually his comments bring to light the universal meanings beneath the archaic exterior."—New York Times

Contemporary South Asia is a new international research journal to be published three times a year from 1992. The journal will present research and analysis on contemporary policy issues in South Asia. The journal will also publish historical analyses to enhance our understanding of the present problems of cooperation and confrontation in the region.

There is a growing realization that South Asia has to be both treated and studied as a region. Contemporary South Asia will do just that. The purposes of the journal will be to cultivate an awareness that South Asia is more than a sum of its parts—a fact of great importance not only to the states and peoples of the region, but to the world as a whole—and to address the major issues facing South Asia from a regional and interdisciplinary perspective.

Contemporary South Asia will focus on issues concerning the region that are not circumscribed by the national borders of the states. While national perspectives will not be ignored, the journal's overriding purpose is to encourage scholars within South Asia and in the global community to search for means (both theoretical and practical) by which our understanding of the present problems of cooperation and confrontation in the region can be enhanced.

NOTES TO CONTRIBUTORS

Modern Asian Studies is concerned with the history, geography, politics, sociology, literature, economics and social anthropology of South Asia, South-East Asia, China and Japan. Contributions should be based on original research or field-work.

All articles (text, notes and references) must be clearly typed in double spacing throughout, including footnotes, on one side only of the paper—preferably A4. Two copies should be submitted. References repeated in the footnotes should be by author and short title; or the Harvard system of citation may be used.

The title of the article and the author's name and affiliation should be typed on a separate page at the beginning of the article.

Tables should be clearly laid out and numbered consecutively. All figures and totals should be checked for accuracy. Maps and figures should be legible in every detail. The spelling of place names should be consistent with that used in the text. Every table, map and figure should have a title and at least one reference in the text.

First proofs only will be sent to the author who will be expected to return them to the Editor within three days. Excessive alterations and additions may be charged to the author.

Each author will receive twenty-five free offprints of his or her article and a copy of the part of the journal in which it appears.

Submission of an article will be taken to imply that it has not been previously published and that it is not on offer to any other publisher. In the interests of authors, copyright is normally assigned to Cambridge University Press.

All correspondence should be addressed to Dr Gordon Johnson, Selwyn College, Cambridge CB3 9DG, England.
