

Articles

- 'A Noble Group of Barrows': Bush Barrow and the Normanton Down Early Bronze Age Cemetery
Two Centuries On
Stuart Needham, FSA, Andrew J Lawson, FSA, and Ann Woodward, FSA 1
- The Siting of Metalwork Hoards in the Bronze Age of South-East England
David Yates and Richard Bradley, FSA 41
- The Environmental and Social Context of the Isleham Hoard
Tim Malim, FSA, Steve Boreham, David Knight, FSA, George Nash, Richard Preece and Jean-Luc Schwenninger 73
- Gildas and the Schools of Cirencester
Andrew Breeze, FSA 131
- The 'Staffordshire Hoard': the Fieldwork
Stephen Dean, Della Hooke, FSA, and Alex Jones 139
- Units of Account in Gold and Silver in Seventh-Century England: Scillingas, Sceattas and Pæningas
John Hines, FSA 153
- Deer, Land, Knives and Halls: Social Change in Early Medieval England
Naomi Sykes, FSA 175
- 'Garments so Chequered': the Bible of Cîteaux, the Bayeux Tapestry and the Vair Pattern
Daniel Phoenix 195
- A Missing Link: a Reappraisal of the Date, Architectural Context and Significance of the Great Tower of Dudley Castle
Malcolm Hislop 211
- A Painted Casket in the Victoria and Albert Museum, London
Henrike Manutwald and Nick Humphrey 235
- Scottish Medieval Parish Churches: the Evidence from the Dioceses of Dunblane and Dunkeld
Richard Fawcett, FSA, Richard Oram, FSA, and Julian Luxford, FSA 261
- The Sparham Corpse Panels: Unique Revelations of Death from Late Fifteenth-Century England
Julian Luxford, FSA 299
- The Construction of Northumberland House and the Patronage of its Original Builder, Lord Henry Howard, 1603–14
Manolo Guerci 341
- Antiquarian Attitudes: Crossed Legs, Crusaders and the Evolution of an Idea
Oliver D Harris 401
- The Parkers of Heytesbury: Archaeological Pioneers
Paul Everill 441
- Prehistoric Annals* and Early Medieval Monasticism: Daniel Wilson, James Young Simpson and their Cave Sites
Kristján Ahronson and T M Charles-Edwards 455
- Reviews 467

Cover image: mid-fourteenth-century painted and carved casket depicting the story of Tristan (see pp 235–60).
© V&A Images/Victoria and Albert Museum, London (www.vam.ac.uk)

Guidance for contributors

The Antiquaries Journal offers electronic access to all subscribers, being published in two online issues in March and September and an annual printed volume combining both issues in September. The submission deadlines are 30 June for publication in the following March and 31 December for the following September issue.

The content of the Journal is multi-disciplinary, multi-national and multi-period in approach, as befits an organization whose worldwide Fellowship is engaged in a very broad range of research based on the study of the material remains of the past – including all aspects of history, archaeology, art and architecture, conservation, heraldry, anthropological, ecclesiastical, documentary, musical, linguistic study and landscape study.

This diversity of coverage is a primary strength of the Journal, and is borne of the conviction that connections and insights often result from reading about research in another field than one's own. For this reason, the Journal seeks a balanced mix of papers in each volume, covering all periods, from prehistory to the present day, and crossing disciplinary boundaries to demonstrate the benefits of bringing different skills and approaches to bear on the chosen topic (for example, studies that deploy evidence based on both historical and archaeological evidence).

In particular, the Society looks for papers that take an overview of a particular period, issue or set of problems, that are based on primary research, that do not simply describe the material remains of the past, but seek to throw light on their significance and meaning by setting them within relevant contexts, and that, in asking and answering questions of importance to the discipline, make a genuine contribution to the advancement of our knowledge in the relevant field of study.

As befits a Society that has been in existence for some 300 years and whose Fellows have helped to shape their evolving disciplines, the Journal is also interested in historicism (the placing of people, ideas and concepts within a historical context) and the development of antiquarian observation and thinking within the wider topic of the history of science and the humanities, as well as the extension of antiquarianism into the fields of public heritage policy, ethics and practice.

The Journal offers a variety of formats for publication, from short papers of at least 1,000 words to longer papers of up to 10,000 words (28 printed pages), including illustrations, as well as long and short book reviews that can also be a platform for synthesis or original thought. With the advent of online publishing, we are also able to offer the capacity for publishing appendices and data sets that support research papers but that are too long for publication in the Journal.

The primary readership of the Journal is the Society's Fellowship, but through library exchanges and institutional sales the Journal reaches a diverse international readership and its readers range from academics actively involved in primary research to students and amateurs. The readers are, by definition, scholarly and well informed, but contributions need to be presented in such a way as to be accessible to those whose specialities lie in fields other than those of the author. Detailed guidance on the preparation of papers for publication and on house style (including the style of footnotes and bibliographies) can be found on Cambridge Journals Online journals service at <http://assets.cambridge.org/ANT/ANTifc.pdf>.

All papers submitted to the Journal for consideration undergo a peer-review process, and might be referred back to authors for further work, and the editors of the Journal have a specific brief to rework material if necessary to ensure that published papers are lucid, succinct and grammatically and syntactically correct. Authors are asked to check papers once edited to ensure that factual errors have not been introduced through this editorial process, but as some authors object to such an interventionist editorial policy, it is best to discuss specific concerns before submitting material for publication.

