

Cover Design: Dan Pinkerton at the Center for Austrian Studies
Cover Art: “Asphaleia at the Opera House.” Bolond Istók, 16 November 1884.
One of the persons catapulted by the malfunctioning Asphaleia system is, once again, Frigyes Podmaniczky.
Source: Image courtesy of the National Széchényi Library of Hungary.
Composition: TechSet
Printer: The Sheridan Press
Text: Minion Pro

AUSTRIAN HISTORY YEARBOOK

VOLUME XLIV • 2013

Editors' Notes

Twenty-Eighth Annual Robert A. Kann Memorial Lecture

Nora Berend

Violence as Identity: Christians and Muslims in Hungary in the Medieval and Early Modern Period

Articles

James Tracy

The Road to Szigetvár: Ferdinand I's Defense of His Hungarian Border, 1548–1566

Werner Telesko,
Richard Kurdiovsky, and Dagmar Sachsenhofer

The Vienna Hofburg between 1835 and 1918—A Residence in the Conflicting Fields of Art, Politics, and Representation

Jonathan Kwan

Austro-German Liberalism and the Coming of the 1867 Compromise: "Politics Again in Flux"

Markian Prokopovych

Scandal at the Opera: Politics, the Press, and the Public at the Inauguration of the Budapest Opera House in 1884

Marsha L. Rozenblit

Creating Jewish Space: German-Jewish Schools in Moravia

John W. Boyer

Power, Partisanship, and the Grid of Democratic Politics: 1907 as the Pivot Point of Modern Austrian History

Thomas Ort

Cubism's Sex: Masculinity and Czech Modernism, 1911–1914

Irina Marin

World War I and Internal Repression: The Case of Major General Nikolaus Cena

Historiography and Politics

Filip Šimetin Šegvić and Tomislav Brandolica

The Age of Heroes in Historiography: The Example of Prince Eugene of Savoy

Ljiljana Radonic

Croatia's Politics of the Past during the Tudman Era (1990–1999)—Old Wine in New Bottles?

Márton Dornbach

Remains of a Picnic: Post-Transition Hungary and Its Austro-Hungarian Past

In Memoriam

John W. Boyer

Fritz Fellner (1922–2012): In Memoriam

Filip and Nikolina Šimetin Šegvić

Mirjana Gross (1922–2012): In Memoriam

plus 35 book reviews