edited by György Haraszti, Professor of Law, University of Budapest.
1981, 256 pp., cloth, Dfl. 57.00/$23.75
ISBN 90 286 0830 3

The present volume is a collection of studies on topics of public and private international law. Contributors to the volume are the most renowned Hungarian experts in this field. The papers are independent of one another. Two of them deal with new fields of international law, namely with space law and the use of nuclear power. The volume includes a wide range of studies dealing with the succession of states, the utilization of the divided water resources with special regard to the Danube Basin, two papers on the legal aspects of economic integration, a study on the promotion of the interests of land-locked states in the new law of the sea. A paper dealing with humanitarian law, namely with the issues raised by the 1977 Protocols Additional to the Geneva Convention on the Protection of the Victims of War is also included. The topical issues of international monetary systems are dealt with. The volume contains a study on human rights and another one on Hungary's consular agreements. Though the volume is primarily meant for jurists, it may be instructive also for experts concerned with timely political issues.

Volume I of this series was published in 1977.
The series is a copublication with Akadémiai Kiadó, Budapest.

LES NOUVELLES CONVENTIONS DE LA HAYE, LEUR APPLICATION PAR LES JUGES NATIONAUX

by Dr. Mathilde Sumampouw, Principal Research Officer in the Interuniversity T.M.C. Asser Institute for International Law, The Hague.

Part II, in the French language
1980, 304 pp., cloth, Dfl. 80.00/$40.00
ISBN 90 286 0870 2

Part I of this reference book was published by the T.M.C. Asser Institute in 1976. The core of the book consisted of court decisions involving the Hague Conventions then in force in the field of private international law. The decisions of Part I were updated in two supplements published in 1976 and 1979.

Part II, appearing in the year of the Fourteenth Session of the Hague Conference, provides up-to-date information on all the materials contained in Part I. The more than 300 cases decided in 10 European countries and the USA, including arbitral awards in international commercial arbitration, cover the period from 1974 to 1980.

This wealth of information has been made accessible by arranging the decisions per Convention and then per legal issue, thus clearly showing similarities and differences in the application of each Convention by a variety of countries and tribunals. Considering the increasing number of Conventions between a growing number of parties, this system is eminently suited to illustrate the problems of application, in particular, of the Conventions on child protection and the maintenance of minors.

Of at least equal importance in practice is the 'situation actuelle' as at 1 July 1980, of the 26 Conventions concluded since 1954. This survey shows the signatures, ratifications, reservations and other declarations relating to each Convention, while referring in some cases to the survey of Part I. Both surveys together reflect the growing importance of the Hague Conventions.

The Conventions have given rise not only to a large number of cases, but also to a vast literature throughout the world, which appears in an 18 page bibliography arranged per session of the Hague Conference, and per Convention.

A detailed analytical table of contents and a table of cases, which make this material even more accessible, complete the book.

Both Part I and Part II, in the realization of which the Permanent Bureau of the Hague Conference has given its co-operation, are indispensable for practicing lawyers and legal scholars who have anything to do with the Hague Conventions in any area of private international law or international procedural law.
