An important forum from
The Journal of Asian Studies

State, Sovereignty, and the People:

A Comparison of the "Rule of Law" in China and India

By Jonathan K. Ocko and David Gilmartin

This groundbreaking article uses a focus on the rule of law to raise comparative questions about the construction of sovereignty and rights in China and India, within the larger global processes that shaped the 19th and 20th centuries. These questions include:

- How did the rule of law help to define the principles on which the Indian and Chinese states rested?
- How did this concept define these states' relationships to the societies they ruled?
- How can the rule of law help us to understand the ways that these states legitimized their authority?
- What are the political implications of China's and India's differences (and similarities) in the role of the law in their societies in the 19th century, and how can these help us to understand their different patterns of historical evolution in the 20th century?

This fascinating research is followed by five commentaries by leading legal historians, then a rejoinder by the article's authors. The commentaries are:

- Sovereignty, Rule of Law, and Ideologies of the Nation,
by Vivienne Shue
- Justice or Legitimacy: A Response to Ocko and Gilmartin,
by Paul W. Kahn
- Rule of Law in China and India: A Historical-Cultural Approach,
by Randall Peerenboom
- Not Just a Concept: Institutions and the "Rule of Law",
by Lauren Benton
- The Limits of Legal Sovereignty: China and India in Recent History,
by Prasenjit Duara

The Journal of Asian Studies (JAS) publishes the very best empirical and multidisciplinary work on Asia, spanning the arts, history, literature, the social sciences, and cultural studies. With coverage reaching from South and Southeast Asia to China, Inner Asia, and Northeast Asia, JAS welcomes broad comparative and transnational studies as well as essays emanating from fine-grained historical, cultural, political, or literary research and interpretation. The journal also publishes clusters of papers representing new and vibrant discussions.

The World Trade Review was established at the initiative of the Secretariat of the World Trade Organization (WTO) in close cooperation with Cambridge University Press. It is an independent journal - the Editor and all but one member of the Editorial Board are drawn from university faculties - that includes articles written from economic, legal, political and inter-disciplinary perspectives on issues of relevance to the multilateral trading system. The journal also includes shorter articles seeking to rebut or challenge published papers.

Leiden Journal of International Law

Instructions for contributors

EDITORIAL POLICY

Leiden Journal of International Law is firmly established as one of Europe's leading journals in the field. It provides a forum for two vital areas, namely international legal theory and international dispute settlement. It is unique in providing the most comprehensive coverage of the world's most important international tribunals in The Hague and elsewhere (such as the ICJ, ICTY, ICC and others), as well as examining new trends in international legal thinking. LJIL is essential reading for academics and practitioners who need to stay abreast of recent developments.

Only articles which fall within the scope of the journal will be considered for publication.

SUBMISSIONS

Articles in good English submitted for publication should be sent to the Managing Editor, Ms. Christine Tremblay, by email via ljil@law.leidenuniv.nl. More information can be found at the editors' website www.grotiuscentre.org (under LJIL)

Submission of a paper will be taken to imply that neither the article as a whole, nor any substantial part of it, has been published previously nor is it being considered for publication elsewhere. Upon acceptance of a paper, the authors will be asked to assign copyright to the Foundation of the Leiden Journal of International Law.

Contributors are responsible for obtaining permission to reproduce any materials, including photographs and illustrations for which they do not hold copyright, and for ensuring that the appropriate acknowledgements are included in the manuscript.

All contributions to LJIL are peer-reviewed.

MANUSCRIPT PREPARATION

The Editors recommend the following word counts for the journal's sections: Articles up to 10,000 words;

Hague International Tribunals and Current Legal Developments up to 8,000 words; Book Review Essays up to 5,000; and Book Reviews up to 1,500 words.

PROCEDURES

After receipt, the contribution will be sent for peer review. If the article is considered eligible for publication, any revisions deemed necessary will be sent to the author. The author will be given three weeks to make the necessary changes.

TEXT CONVENTIONS

Copy-editing can be a lengthy and complex business, so it is essential that contributors observe the LJIL's text conventions closely. Typescripts which do not may be returned for amendment.

Contributions should refer to the LJIL's rules of citation and points of style, which can be found at http://assets.cambridge.org/LJL/ljl_ifc.pdf

PROOFS

Proofs may be expected about three months before publication. Only essential typographical or factual errors may be changed at proof stage. Resist the temptation to revise or add to the text. The publisher reserves the right to charge authors for correction of non-typographical errors.

OFFPRINTS

Until December 2009, if the article is published, the author will receive 25 offprints of the paper. Extra copies may be purchased from the publisher if ordered at proof stage. Authors of book reviews will receive one complimentary copy of the Journal.

From the first issue of the 2010 volume, authors of articles, review essays and book reviews will receive a pdf file of their contribution and a complimentary issue upon publication. Offprints can be purchased if the form is completed and returned to the publisher on receipt of the first proofs.
