

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

MARY H. BAKER is an Assistant Professor of Sociology at Arizona State University. Her research focuses primarily on using structural equation models to estimate status attainment processes.

RONALD EVERETT is a doctoral candidate in Sociology at the University of Pennsylvania. He is a research associate at the Center of Studies in Criminology and Criminal Law. His research focuses on longitudinal studies of delinquency.

DAVID F. GREENBERG is a Professor of Sociology at New York University. His most recent books include Mathematical Criminology, Crime and Capitalism: Essays in Marxist Criminology, and Linear Panel Analysis: Models of Quantitative Change (with Ronald Kessler).

MILTON HEUMANN, who received his Ph.D. from Yale University, is a Professor of Political Science at Rutgers University. He is the author of Plea Bargaining: The Experiences of Prosecutors, Judges, and Defense Attorney (1978).

ALLAN V. HORWITZ is an Associate Professor of Sociology at Rutgers University. He has published articles about various topics in psychiatric sociology, the sociology of law, and criminology and is the author of The Social Control of Mental Illness (1982).

COLIN LOFTIN is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Sociology and a Faculty Associate in the Center for Political Studies, Institute for Social Research, University of Michigan. He received the Ph.D. degree from the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill.

RICHARD McCLEARY is an Associate Professor of Criminal Justice at the State University of New York at Albany. He has published many articles on criminal justice and methodology, especially time-series analysis.

DAVID McDOWALL is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Sociology at the State University of New York at Buffalo. He received his Ph.D. from Northwestern University and has been a post-doctoral fellow in the Center for Research on Social Organization at the University of Michigan.

BARBARA NIENSTEDT is a doctoral candidate in Public Administration at Arizona State University specializing in applied statistics. She is a research analyst for the Governor's Crime Commission (Arizona) and has published articles on policy analysis and implementation.

GUNTHER TEUBNER is a Professor of Private Law and the Sociology of Law at the University of Bremen, Germany. He is currently teaching at the European University Institute at Florence, Italy. He received his Habilitation in 1977 at the University of Tübingen, Germany, and has published books on the theory of general clauses in contract law and on organizational democracy in private organizations. His current research is concerned with co-determination and the public responsibility of economic organizations and with theories of law in the welfare state.