

In this volume, deriving from the Royal Institute of Philosophy conference 1993, leading international environmental philosophers further the debate about the value of nature, the concept of the environment and the metaphysical, ethical, social and international implications of these concepts. It thus helps to rectify the neglect in British Philosophy this century of nature and the natural environment, and points to the inadequacy of much contemporary ethical and political theory. At the same time, it will assist environmentalists to reflect on their own concepts and principles. The essays from contributors in the USA, UK and Australia, were pre-circulated, debated at the conference and then revised for publication.

CONTRIBUTORS

Robin Attfield
Andrew Belsey
Stephen Clark
Roger Crisp
Nigel Dower
Robert Elliot
Frederick Ferre
Tim Hayward
Alan Holland
Dale Jamieson
Keekok Lee
Peter List
Ruth McNally
Mary Midgley
Holmes Rolston III
Peter Wheale

Cover design by Ken Farnhill

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

ISBN 0-521-46903-1

9 780521 469036