

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

JEREMY ADELMAN is Walter Samuel Carpenter III Professor of Spanish Civilization and Culture at Princeton University, where he is also the director of the Council for International Teaching and Research. The author and editor of eight books and dozens of articles and essays, his most recent publications include Sovereignty and Revolution in the Iberian Atlantic (2006) and Worlds Together, Worlds Apart: A History of Humankind from Origins to the Present (2010). He has just completed a biography of the great twentieth-century social scientist Albert O. Hirschman.

JAVIERA BARANDIARÁN is a doctoral candidate in environmental science policy and management at the University of California, Berkeley. Her dissertation traces scientific and expert participation in Chilean environmental politics to examine how scientists are incorporated into emerging and contested democratic practices.

MARC BECKER is professor of Latin American history at Truman State University. His research focuses on constructions of race, class, and gender in popular movements in the Andes. He is the author of Pachakutik: Indigenous Movements and Electoral Politics in Ecuador (2010) and Indians and Leftists in the Making of Ecuador's Modern Indigenous Movements (2008), and coeditor (with Kim Clark) of Highland Indians and the State in Modern Ecuador (2007).

CHRISTOPHER CONWAY is associate professor of Spanish at the University of Texas at Arlington. He is the author of The Cult of Bolívar in Latin American Literature (2003) and the editor of two books: Peruvian Traditions by Ricardo Palma (2004) and The U.S.-Mexican War: A Binational Reader (2010). Other recent publications include articles on masculinity in nineteenth-century Mexico and Ignacio Manuel Altamirano.

JOHN C. DUGAS is associate professor of political science and director of the international and area studies major at Kalamazoo College. He received his doctorate in political science from Indiana University. He has worked since 1990 primarily on issues of political reform in Colombia, including decentralization, constitutional reform, and political party reform. In recent years, he has written about U.S. foreign policy toward Colombia and human rights. His current research focuses on the history, role, and effectiveness of the Human Rights Ombudsman's Office in Colombia and Ecuador. He is the coauthor of Los caminos de la descentralización: Diversidad y retos de la transformación municipal (1992) and editor of La Constitución de 1991 ¿Un pacto político viable? (1993). He has also published articles in the Journal of Latin American Studies, Latin American Research Review, Third World Quarterly, and América Latina Hoy.

MAIKOL ELIZONDO-LARA es gerente de fármaco-economía de Merck México. Tiene un doctorado en economía por Universidad de las Américas, Puebla, México, y una maestría en economía de la salud por Universidad de Costa Rica. Sus áreas de interés son la calidad de vida, la satisfacción en salud y la economía de la salud.

Latin American Research Review, Vol. 47, No. 1. © 2012 by the Latin American Studies Association.

ERIN S. FINZER received her doctorate in Spanish at the University of Kansas and is an assistant professor of Spanish at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock. She specializes in twentieth-century Central American poetry and cultural studies. Her current research explores Latin American female intellectuals as “cosmic conservationists,” or cultural agents promoting an early environmentalist ethic during the pan-American conservation movement of the interwar period.

NESTOR IGNACIO GASPARRI estudió ingeniería forestal en la Universidad Nacional de La Plata (Argentina). Trabajó para el gobierno nacional argentino en el monitoreo de bosques nativos entre los años 2001 y 2005. Posteriormente, con una beca del Consejo Nacional de Investigaciones Científicas y Técnicas (CONICET), realizó un doctorado en ciencias biológicas en la Universidad Nacional de Tucumán (Argentina). Sus temas de investigación se orientan hacia los cambios de uso de la tierra y las emisiones de carbono en los bosques argentinos, especialmente en la región chaqueña. Actualmente es investigador asistente del CONICET y docente en la Facultad de Ciencias Naturales e Instituto Miguel Lillo de la Universidad Nacional de Tucumán.

ARTHUR HUGHES is associate professor of Spanish at Ohio University. He specializes in film, African studies, and contemporary Spanish Peninsular culture. He has published extensively on the works of Terenci Moix and contemporary Peninsular writers. His current research focuses on Lusophone culture with an emphasis on black identities.

JULIETA KRAPOVICKAS es licenciada en geografía por la Universidad Nacional de Tucumán y máster en estudios territoriales y de la población por la Universidad Autónoma de Barcelona. Actualmente se desempeña como becaria doctoral en el Instituto Superior de Estudios Sociales del Consejo Nacional de Investigaciones Científicas y Técnicas (CONICET) y de la Universidad Nacional de Tucumán.

CARMEN E. LAMAS (Ph.D., University of Pennsylvania, 2004) has been a visiting assistant professor at Amherst College and Columbia University. She is currently a research associate at the University of Pennsylvania. As of June 2012 she will be an assistant professor of Spanish and director of the Hispanic Institute at La Salle University in Philadelphia. Her research concentrates on how race affects contemporary scholarship regarding the transnational, trans-American, and transatlantic nature of nineteenth-century Latin American and Latina/o literature. Her book La Virgen de la Caridad del Cobre: Race and Cuban National Identity is nearing completion.

PABLO PAOLASSO se recibió de licenciado en geografía en la Universidad Nacional de Tucumán, donde obtuvo también su doctorado en geografía en 2004. Fue becario del Consejo Nacional de Investigaciones Científicas y Técnicas (CONICET) entre 1999 y 2006. Actualmente se desempeña como investigador asistente del CONICET en el Instituto Superior de Estudios Sociales y como profesor adjunto de metodología de la investigación geográfica en el Departamento de Geografía de la Facultad de Filosofía y Letras de la Universidad Nacional de Tucumán.

MARIANO ROJAS es profesor investigador de la Facultad Latinoamericana de Ciencias Sociales, Sede México, y de la Universidad Popular Autónoma del Estado de Puebla. Tiene un doctorado en economía por Ohio State University. Sus áreas de interés son calidad de vida, bienestar subjetivo, desarrollo económico y organización industrial.

JON SHEFNER is professor and head of the sociology department at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville. He is the author of The Illusion of Civil Society: Democratization and Community Mobilization in Low-Income Mexico (2008), and coeditor with Patricia Fernández-Kelly of Globalization and Beyond: New Examinations of Global Power and Its Alternatives (2011) and Out of the Shadows: Political Action and the Informal Economy in Latin America (2006), as well as coeditor with Fran Ansley of Global Connections and Local Receptions: New Latino Immigration to the Southeastern United States (2009).

CRISTHIAN TEÓFILO DA SILVA has a doctorate in social anthropology from the Universidade de Brasília. He is professor at the Research Center and Graduate Program on the Americas (Centro de Pesquisa e Pos-Graduação sobre as Américas) and is currently doing comparative research on indigenous and First Nations movements, indigenist policies, and indigenism in Brazil and Canada. He is coeditor, with Antonio Carlos de Souza Lima and Stephen Grant Baines, of Problemáticas sociais para sociedades plurais: Políticas indigenistas, sociais e de desenvolvimento em perspectiva comparada (2009).

CAMILLA TOWNSEND is professor of history at Rutgers University, New Brunswick. She is the author of four books, most recently Malintzin's Choices: An Indian Woman in the Conquest of Mexico (2006) and Here in This Year: Seventeenth-Century Nahuatl Annals of the Tlaxcala-Puebla Valley (2010). She is currently a Guggenheim fellow and is at work on a wide-ranging study of indigenous Mexican historical annals.

NICOLE VON GERMETEN received her doctorate in history from the University of California, Berkeley. She is an associate professor at Oregon State University. She has published two books and several articles and essays on race, religion, and sexuality in colonial Spanish America. Her current project explores sexuality, honor, race, and violence in colonial Cartagena de Indias.