MUNKMAN'S DAMAGES FOR PERSONAL INJURIES AND DEATH

Fourth Edition, 1970. By John Munkman, LL.B., Barrister-at-Law.

Munkman provides vital information on the working of the law in relation to the assessment of damages for personal injuries, including damages on death. It gives a clear insight into the principles by which compensation is determined. Much new material has been added throughout the work, particularly the section on estimating loss of future earnings.

OXFORD BOOKS FOR STUDENTS

Anson's Law of Contract

Edited by A. G. GUEST, Professor of English Law,
King's College, London

So rapid has been the development of the law of contract in the past five years that many traditional principles have undergone extensive change. The enactment of the Misrepresentation Act 1967, together with a number of important decisions of the House of Lords, have necessitated much new writing in this twenty-third edition of Sir William Anson's classic work. Now in its ninetieth year, 'Anson' has consistently provided a clear and comprehensible statement of the law for students. Its long life is some indication of the extent to which it has answered their needs and difficulties.
