

Nominating Committee Offers Slate for 2000-01 Officers and Council Members

The Association's 2000 Nominating Committee convened at the national office on February 26 and agreed upon the following slate of officers and Council members. Members of the Association will have an opportunity to meet the nominees at a special gathering on Thursday, September 1 at 12:30 p.m. as part of the 2000 Annual Meeting in Washington, DC. Elections will be held during the Business Meeting on Saturday, September 2 at 5:30 p.m. The Annual Meeting Program will have the room location for each event.

Serving on the 2000 Nominating Committee were Robert Axelord, University of Michigan; Ruth Berins

Collier, University of California, Berkeley; Mary Katzenstein, Cornell University; Elinor Ostrom, Indiana University; Dianne Pinderhughes, University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign; and David Rohde, Michigan State University (chair).

President-Elect (2000-2001)

Robert D. Putnam, Harvard University

Robert D. Putnam is the Peter and Isabel Malkin Professor of Public Policy at Harvard University, where he teaches undergraduate and graduate courses in American politics, international relations, comparative politics, and public policy. He is the founder of The Saguaro Seminar: Civic Engagement in America, a program that has brought together leading practitioners and thinkers for a multiyear discussion of broad-scale, actionable ideas for fortifying our nation's civic connectedness.

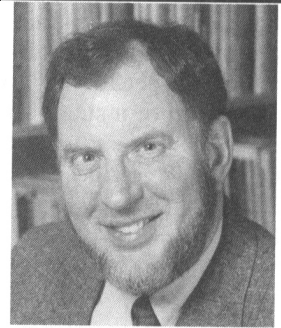

Before going to Harvard in 1979, Putnam taught at the University of Michigan and served on the staff of the National Security Council. Raised in a small town in the Midwest, he graduated from Swarthmore College in 1963, attended Balliol College, Oxford, and received his Ph.D. from Yale University in 1970. He is the recipient of honorary degrees from Swarthmore, Ohio State University, Stockholm University, and the University of Antwerp.

Putnam has authored or coauthored ten books and more than thirty scholarly works, including Making Democracy Work: Civic Traditions in Modern Italy (Princeton University Press, 1993), which has been published in 10 languages and praised by The Economist as "a great work of social science, worthy to rank alongside de Tocqueville, Pareto and Weber." His other works include Double-Edged Diplomacy: International Bargaining and Domestic Politics (University of California Press, 1993), which he coedited with Peter B. Evans and Harold K. Jacobson and which developed from his 1988 article "Diplomacy and Domestic Politics: The Logic of Two-Level Games"; Hanging Together: The Seven-Power Summits (Harvard University Press, 1984), coauthored with Nicholas Bayne; Bureaucrats and Politicians in Western Democracies (Harvard University Press, 1981), coauthored with Joel D. Aberbach and Bert Rockman; Comparative Study of Political Elites (Prentice-Hall, 1976); and Beliefs of Politicians: Ideology, Conflict, and Democracy in Britain and Italy (Yale University Press, 1973). In June 2000, his study of civic engagement in the United States will be published by Simon & Schuster under the title Bowling Alone: The Collapse and Revival of American Community.

Putnam's previous APSA responsibilities have included service as vice president and as a member of the Council, the Program Committee, and the Task Force on Civic Education. While department chair at Harvard, he was active in APSA efforts to increase minority graduate enrollment. A former dean of the John F. Kennedy School of Government, he has also served as associate dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and director of the Center for International Affairs. He sits on the Advisory Council on Environmentally Sustainable Development at the World Bank and is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations and the Trilateral Commission. In addition, Putnam has served as president of the Conference Group on Italian Politics, on the Executive Committee of the British Politics Group, and on the editorial boards of the American Political Science Review, British Journal of Political Science, International Organization, Legislative Studies Quarterly, and Comparative Political Studies.

His awards include APSA's Gregory Luebbert Award, the Charles H. Levin Award of the International Political Science Association, and the Louis Brownlow Book Award of the National Academy of Public Administration. He was named a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in 1980 and a Guggenheim fellow in 1988.

---

Vice President (2000–2001)*Valerie Bunce, Cornell University

Valerie Bunce is professor of government at Cornell University. Since receiving her Ph.D. from the University of Michigan in 1976, she has taught at Lake Forest College, Northwestern University, and, since 1991, Cornell. She has also been a visiting professor at the University of Chicago, University of Washington, and University of Zagreb.

Her research and teaching interests have been eclectic, reflecting the dramatic changes in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe—her primary area of expertise—over the course of her academic career. During the Cold War era, she concentrated on the policy consequences of leadership succession in the West and the East, the political economy of state socialism and the Soviet bloc, and the self-subversion of state socialism with respect to economic performance and the relative power of the party-state versus the society. With the collapse of Communist Party hegemony in 1989–1990, the focus of her research and teaching shifted—as did the very names (and number) of the countries she analyzed. Her work over the past decade has focused on regime transition, the invention of a single Europe, the relationship between democratization and economic reform, and state dissolution. Regardless of topic, her work has always been comparative, with cases coming primarily from the eastern half of Europe.

Her articles have appeared in the American Political Science Review, International Organization, Comparative Politics, Comparative Political Studies, American Journal of Political Science, British Journal of Political Science, Slavic Review, and Eastern European Politics and Societies. She has also published articles in Polish, Russian, Croatian, and French social science journals. Her most recent book is Subversive Institutions: The Design and the Destruction of Socialism and the State (Cambridge University Press, 1999).

At Cornell University she has been a director of the Slavic and East European Studies Program and currently serves as acting chair of the government department. She has served on the editorial boards of APSR and International Studies Quarterly and is a current member of the editorial boards of Slavic Review, Comparative Political Studies, and Problems of Postcommunism. In addition, she is a member of the Fulbright Advisory Board, chair of the Eastern Europe Committee of the American Council of Learned Societies, and president-elect of the American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies. She has served on the Program Committee for APSA's Annual Meeting on two occasions and has also been a member of several other Association committees.

---

Vice President (2000–2001)*Mark Schneider, State University of New York, Stony Brook

Mark Schneider is professor of political science at the State University of New York, Stony Brook, where he also serves as department chair. He received his B.A. from Brooklyn College in 1967 and his Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill in 1974. He is the author of The Competitive City: The Political Economy of Suburbia (University of Pittsburgh Press, 1989) and, with Paul Teske, Public Entrepreneurs: Agents for Change in American Government (Princeton University Press, 1995). His newest book, Choosing Schools: Consumer Choice and the Quality of American Schools, which he wrote with Paul Teske and Melissa Marschall, will be published by Princeton this fall. He has written or edited several other books and has published over 50 articles in the leading journals in political science, sociology, and public policy.

Schneider has served on the executive committees of both the urban politics and public policy sections of APSA. He served as the treasurer of the policy section and will be the president of that section during 2000–2001. He has also been a member of APSA's William Anderson Award Committee as well as numerous other award committees for both the urban and policy sections. Schneider is program co-chair for the 2001 meeting of the Midwest Political Science Association.

He is currently working on several projects concerning the flow of information about schools and how modern information technologies can aid parents in finding better schools. He created DC-SchoolSearch.com (<http://dcschoolsearch.com/shopping>) both to give parents comprehensive information about all the public schools in Washington, DC, and to track how parents use information when choosing schools for their children. On a completely different tack, Schneider is collaborating with Stony Brook colleague John Scholz on a study of the evolution of cooperative federal-state-local policy-making and enforcement regimes through the National Estuary Program.

Vice President (2000–2001)

Susan Welch, Pennsylvania State University, University Park

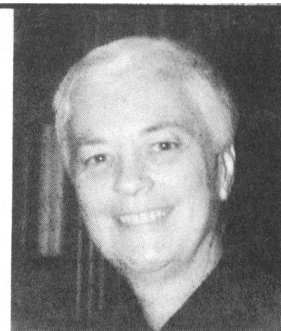

Susan Welch is dean of the College of the Liberal Arts and professor of political science at Pennsylvania State University, University Park, positions she has held since 1991. Before moving to Penn State, she was the Carl A. Happold Professor of Political Science at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln.

Professor Welch received her B.A. degree in history and her M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in political science from the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. Upon receiving her Ph.D. in 1970, she took a position at Nebraska.

Welch is a specialist in American urban, ethnic, and women's politics. She is the author of nearly 150 scholarly articles, six books, two textbooks (including an American government textbook now in its seventh edition), and three edited collections. Her most recent books include Affirmative Action and Minority Enrollments: The Impact of Bakke on Medical and Law Schools (University of Michigan Press, 1998), which she coauthored with John Gruhl, and Race and Place: Residence and Race Relations in an American City (Cambridge University Press, 2001), coauthored with Lee Sigelman, Tim Bledsoe, and Michael Combs.

Her work has been funded by the National Science Foundation, National Institutes of Mental Health, and National Institute of Justice. She is currently a member of the editorial boards of the American Political Science Review, American Politics Quarterly, Social Science Quarterly, and Women & Politics, and has previously served on the boards of the American Journal of Political Science, Journal of Politics, and Public Opinion Quarterly. She is a past president of the Midwest Political Science Association and APSA's Organized Section on Women and Politics and Organized Section on Urban Politics. She is also a past secretary, treasurer, and council member of APSA, and has served on several APSA committees.

Secretary (2000–2001)

Judith Hicks Stiehm, Florida International University

Judith Hicks Stiehm is professor of political science at and former provost of Florida International University. She attended Oberlin College and received her B.A. in East Asian studies from the University of Wisconsin, her M.A. in American history from Temple University, and her Ph.D. in political theory from Columbia University. She has taught at San Francisco State, Wisconsin, UCLA, and, for seventeen years, the University of Southern California. She spent one year affiliated with the National Academy of Science and another with the Peacekeeping Institute at the U.S. Army War College. She is currently serving as a full-time consultant to the U.N. Department of Peacekeeping Operations.

Her Arms and the Enlisted Woman (Temple University Press, 1989) won APSA's Victoria Schuck Award. Bring Me Men and Women: Mandated Change at the U.S. Air Force Academy (University of California Press, 1981) won USC's Phi Kappa Phi Award as the best faculty publication of the year. Her other volumes include Non-violent Power: Active and Passive Resistance in America (Heath, 1973); Women and Men's Wars (Pergamon, 1983); Women's Views of the Political World of Men (Transnational, 1984); and It's Our Military Too! (Temple University Press, 1996). She has won campus awards for research, for teaching, and for academic innovation, as well as an Army medal for Outstanding Civilian Service.

Stiehm was a founder of USC's Program for the Study of Women and Men in Society, of the Women's Caucus in Political Science, and the Sex Roles and Politics Research Committee of the International Political Science Association. She has served as president of the Women's Caucus and of the Western Political Science Association. She has also served on APSA's Recruitment and Placement Committee, Ethics Committee, Women and Government Task Force, Nominating Committee, Executive Committee, and, as chair, Franklin L. Burdette Pi Sigma Alpha Award Committee. She is a current member of the Council on Foreign Relations and a past member of the Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services, and the California Postsecondary Education Commission.

Richard A. Brody, Stanford University

Richard A. Brody is Emeritus Professor of Political Science at Stanford University, where he taught from 1962 to 1994. He is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences. His books include Assessing the President: The Media, Elite Opinion, and Public Support (Stanford University Press, 1991); Reasoning and Choice: Explorations in Political Psychology (Cambridge University Press, 1991), which he coauthored with Paul Sniderman and Philip Tetlock and which won APSA's Woodrow Wilson book award in 1992; and Political Persuasion and Attitude Change (University of Michigan Press, 1996), coedited with Paul Sniderman and Diana Mutz.

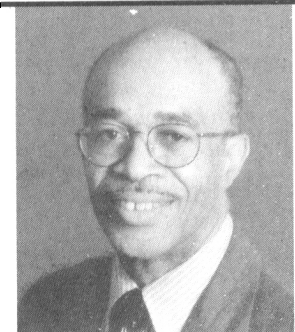

Professor Brody has served on APSA's Council (1977–79), chaired APSA's Departmental Services Committee and Committee on Education, and served on its Publications Committee. He was an associate editor of APSR and headed the editorial board of PS. He was president of the Western Political Science Association in 1987–88 and the editor of Political Behavior from 1990 to 1997.

Bob Holmes, Clark Atlanta University

Bob Holmes is the director of the Southern Center for Studies in Public Policy and professor of political science at Clark Atlanta University. He is also a state representative who has served in the Georgia General Assembly since 1975. Bob earned his B.S. in political science from Shepherd College in 1964, and his M.A. in public law and government in 1966 and his Ph.D. in political science in 1969 from Columbia University. Prior to coming to Clark Atlanta University in 1971 to help establish a Ph.D. program in political science, he served on the faculties of Hunter College and Southern University, as coordinator of the Harvard-Columbia Intensive Summer Studies Program, and as director of Bernard Baruch College's Search for Education, Elevation and Knowledge program. Bob has also served as executive vice president of Dataware Consultants and president of Policy Design Corporation. His academic honors include being named a United Negro College Fund Distinguished Scholar, fellow of the Southern Center for International Studies, senior research associate with the Urban Affairs and Urban Transportation Project, and adjunct fellow of the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies.

Bob has jointly pursued careers as academician and elected official for more than 25 years. He has published more than 75 articles and book chapters and more than 20 monographs on topics as varied as Chinese politics, African-American politics, reapportionment, and environmental policy, and has served on the advisory editorial boards of the Journal of Social and Behavioral Sciences, Phylon, and the Review of Black Political Economy. He is a former chair of the advisory editorial board of the National Conference of Black Political Scientists' newsletter, and is currently managing editor of the Clark Atlanta University Press. Also, he edits and contributes to two annual publications: The Status of Black Atlanta (since 1993) and The Georgia Legislative Review (since 1991). Bob has served as president of the Association of Social and Behavioral Scientists, University Center in Georgia Interdepartmental Political Science Group, and the National Conference of Black Political Scientists; chair of the Georgia Legislative Black Caucus and APSA's Ralph Bunche Award Committee; and co-chair of the National Association of Environmental Professionals' Committee on Academic Centers of Excellence.

He serves on the board of directors of 10 national, state, and local organizations, and his academic, legislative, and civic activities have earned him numerous awards and honors, including the Amoco Foundation Excellence in Teaching Award, National Black Caucus of State Legislators' Legislator of the Year Award, Atlanta Jaycee's Outstanding Young Man of the Year, Metropolitan Atlanta YMCA's Layperson of the Year, Georgia Environmental Council's Legislator of the Year, National Association of Retired Educators' Legislator of the Year, and Southern Organizing Committee for Economic and Social Justice's Traillazer Award. A section of I-285 in Atlanta has been dedicated as the "Bob Holmes Freeway."

Bob is a founding member of the Capital City Bank and Trust Company and of the North Georgia National Bank, as well as chair of the Board of Trustees of Jomandi Theater Company, which is the third largest African-American Theater Company in the U.S. He is a past president of the Metropolitan Atlanta YMCA and recently served on the Atlanta Host Committee for the U.S. Indoor Track and Field Championships 2000.

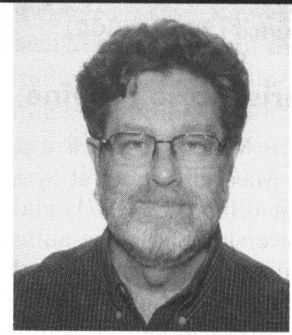

Professor Holmes has served as an expert witness in several federal district court cases involving voting rights and as an advisor/consultant to numerous public and private sector agencies and corporations in the U.S., China, Mongolia, Japan, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Cameroon, Ghana, Lesotho, Nigeria, and South Africa.

Robert R. Kaufman, Rutgers University, New Brunswick

Robert R. Kaufman is a professor of political science at Rutgers University. He received a Ph.D. in government from Harvard University in 1967 and specializes in comparative studies of Latin American politics. Besides teaching at Rutgers, Kaufman has been a senior research associate at Columbia University's Institute for Latin American and Iberian Studies since 1985. Over the course of his career, he has been a visiting professor at Yale, Princeton, and the University of Pennsylvania, a research associate at the Harvard Center for International Affairs, a member of the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, and a research fellow at Collegium Budapest. Kaufman has also served on a number of editorial boards, including those of PS and Latin American Research Review, and has been a division chair for annual meetings of the American Political Science Association and the Latin American Studies Association.

Kaufman has written extensively on the politics of economic reform and democratic transitions, focusing initially on comparisons within Latin America and then turning to broader interregional comparisons with Asia and Eastern Europe. He is author of The Politics of Debt in Argentina, Brazil, and Mexico: Economic Stabilization in the 1980s (Institute of International Studies, University of California, 1988); coeditor, with Stephan Haggard, of The Politics of Economic Adjustment: International Constraints, Distributive Conflicts, and the State (Princeton University Press, 1992); and co-author, with Stephan Haggard, of The Political Economy of Democratic Transitions (Princeton University Press, 1995), winner of APSA's Organized Section on Comparative Politics' Gregory Leubbert Book Award. He has also contributed articles to the American Political Science Review, Comparative Politics, and International Organization, and is a coeditor of and contributor to Reforming the State: Fiscal and Welfare Reform in Transition Economies (Cambridge University Press, forthcoming).

L. Sandy Maisel, Colby College

L. Sandy Maisel is the William R. Kenan, Jr. Professor of Government at Colby College, where he has taught since 1971. He received his A.B. from Harvard University in 1967 and his Ph.D. in public law and government from Columbia in 1971. Maisel has been a visiting professor at Monash University, the University of Melbourne, Harvard, and Stanford. In 1998 he was the Philippine Centennial Distinguished Fulbright Lecturer, and, in 1999, a guest scholar at The Brookings Institution.

Maisel served a term on APSA's Council (1989–91) and as APSA representative on the Board of the Consortium of Social Science Associations (1995–98). He was chair of the Association's Organized Section on Legislative Studies in 1987–1988 and of its Organized Section on Political Organizations and Parties from 1993 to 1995. He has served on both sections' Executive Committees and as program division chair for both. He was also on the APSA Program Committee in 1988 and on the Association's Task Force on Gays and Lesbians in the Profession in 1993. He has served one term as president and six years on the Executive Committee of the New England Political Science Association.

In his research, Maisel focuses on congressional elections and on political parties. He is the author or editor of twelve books, including Parties and Elections in America: The Electoral Process, 3rd ed. (Rowman & Littlefield, 1999); Two Parties—Or More? The American Party System, with John Bibby (Westview, 1998); The Parties Respond: Changes in the American Party System, 3rd ed. (Westview, 1998); American Political Parties and Elections: An Encyclopedia (Garland, 1991); and From Obscurity to Oblivion: Running in the Congressional Primary, Rev. ed. (University of Tennessee Press, 1986). His published articles have appeared in a number of political science journals and anthologies.

He is currently co-principal investigator, with Walter J. Stone, of the Candidate Emergence Study, a long-term examination of congressional candidacies. In addition, he has served on the editorial boards of five political science journals and is currently series editor for Westview Press's Dilemmas in American Politics and special projects consultant for Rowman & Littlefield. His homepage, which details his teaching activities as well as his research, can be found at www.colby.edu/govt/faculty/lsm/main.html.

Doris Marie Provine, Syracuse University

Doris Marie Provine is a professor of political science in the Maxwell School at Syracuse University. Provine earned her J.D. (1971) and Ph.D. (1977) from Cornell University. She is the author of several monographs, including Case Selection on the U.S. Supreme Court (University of Chicago Press, 1980); Judging Credentials: Non-lawyer Judges and the Politics of Professionalism (University of Chicago Press, 1986); and Settlement Strategies for District Judges (U.S. Government Printing Office, 1987). She has contributed chapters to a number of volumes in socio-legal studies, including Courts, Law and Politics in Comparative Perspective (Yale University Press, 1996) and Supranational Courts: The Legalization of Politics at a New Level (University Press of Florida, 1997) and is the author of articles on privatization of courts, human rights for women, and race issues in sentencing. She studies judicial politics with a cross-disciplinary and cross-national perspective and is especially concerned with how race and gender relate to individuals' treatment under law and by authorities.

Currently, Professor Provine is working at the National Science Foundation, where she directs the Program on Law and Social Science. She has served as town justice in Virgil, New York; department chair, treasurer, and member of the Board of Trustees of the Law and Society Association; and commissioner of the Trial Court Performance Standards Project for the National Center for State Courts. For APSA, she has chaired the law and courts section and the Corwin prize committee. Professor Provine has also represented her university abroad, teaching in Strasbourg, France (1991–93) and Madrid, Spain (1998–99).

Kathryn Sikkink, University of Minnesota

Kathryn Sikkink is a professor of political science at the University of Minnesota. She received her M.A. and Ph.D. in political science from Columbia University. Her publications include Ideas and Institutions: Developmentalism in Brazil and Argentina (Cornell University Press, 1991); The Power of Human Rights: International Norms and Domestic Change (Cambridge University Press, 1999), which she coedited with Thomas Risse and Stephen Ropp; and Activists Beyond Borders: Advocacy Networks in International Politics (Cornell University Press, 1998), which she coauthored with Margaret Keck. This last book won Sikkink a share of the 1999 Grawemeyer Award for Ideas Improving World Order and the International Studies Association's Chadwick Alger Award for the best work in the area of international organization.

Her current research interests include the influence of international law on domestic politics (especially in the area of human rights), transnational social movements and networks, and the role ideas and norms play in international relations and foreign policy making. She is a member of the editorial board for International Organization, the international advisory board for International Studies Review, and the Social Science Research Council/MacArthur Foundation Committee on International Peace and Security.

Katherine Tate, University of California, Irvine

Katherine Tate is associate professor of political science at the University of California, Irvine. She received her B.A. in political science with honors from the University of Chicago, and her Ph.D. from the University of Michigan. Tate taught at Harvard University and Ohio State University before joining UC-Irvine's political science department in 1997, where she is currently graduate director. In 1996 she was a co-recipient of the Women's Caucus Mentor Award. She has served on several APSA book and dissertation award committees and as program division chair for elections and voting behavior, race and ethnicity, and urban politics for meetings of APSA and the Midwest Political Science Association. In 1996, she was a fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences.

Tate has focused on the electoral behavior of African Americans as well as the politics of race, women, and minority groups. She teaches courses in these fields as well as in American government and urban politics. She is the author of From Protest to Politics: The New Black Voters in American Elections (Harvard University Press and Russell Sage Foundation, 1993), which was cowinner of the Southern Political Science Association's V. O. Key, Jr. Book Award in 1994 and the National Conference of Black Political Scientists' Outstanding Book Award in 1995. In 1998, she coauthored African Americans and the American Political System, 4th ed. (Prentice-Hall) with Lucius J. Barker and Mack H. Jones. She is also the author of a number of book chapters and her articles have appeared in the American Political Science Review and Political Psychology.

She is the principal investigator of the 1996 National Black Election Study, which was funded by the National Science Foundation, and co-principal investigator of the 1988 National Black Election Study. With Valeria Sinclair Chapman, Tate is completing book on the political representation of African Americans in the U.S. Congress titled Symbols and Substance: Representing Black Elections in the U.S. Congress. She is also currently engaged in a collaborative project involving comparative surveys of blacks in South Africa, the U.S., Brazil, and the U.K.

Council (2000–2002)

Margaret Weir, University of California, Berkeley

Margaret Weir is professor of sociology and political science at the University of California, Berkeley, and a nonresident senior fellow at The Brookings Institution. She was previously a senior fellow at Brookings and has taught in the government department at Harvard University. Weir received her Ph.D. in political science from the University of Chicago in 1986. She has been a fellow at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton and a visiting scholar at the Russell Sage Foundation. She is the recipient of grants from the Ford Foundation, Russell Sage Foundation, German Marshall Fund, American Council of Learned Societies, and Social Science Research Council. Her research and teaching interests include political sociology, American political development, urban politics and policy, and comparative welfare state studies.

Most recently, Weir edited The Social Divide: Political Parties and the Future of Activist Government (Brookings Institution Press, 1998), a study of social policy in the Clinton administration. Her other books include Politics and Jobs: The Boundaries of Employment Policy in the United States (Princeton University Press, 1992); The Politics of Social Policy in the United States (Princeton University Press, 1988), which she coedited with Ann Shola

Orloff and Theda Skocpol; and Schooling for All: Class, Race and the Decline of the Democratic Ideal (Basic Books, 1985), coauthored with Ira Katznelson. Weir is also coauthor, with Benjamin Ginsberg and Theodore Lowi of a textbook on American government titled We the People (Norton, 1999). She is currently at work on a study of metropolitan inequalities and city-suburban politics in the United States.

Weir served as president of the American Political Science Association's Organized Section on Politics and History in 1997–98. She was also a member of the Executive Council of APSA's Organized Section on Urban Politics and its Organized Section on Public Policy. Weir served on the Association's Committee on Education and Professional Development from 1996 to 1999. She is currently a member of the Social Science Advisory Board of the Poverty and Race Research Action Council and the White House Fellows Regional Selection Committee. She is a member of the editorial board of Politics and Society.

Continuing Officers and Council for 2000–2001 will be:

President (2000–2001)

Robert Jervis, Columbia University

Robert Jervis is Adlai E. Stevenson Professor of International Politics at Columbia University, where he teaches courses ranging from introductory undergraduate surveys to advanced research seminars. He received his B.A. from Oberlin College in 1962 and his Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley in 1968. He has previously taught at Harvard and UCLA. His System Effects: Complexity in Political Life (Princeton University Press, 1997) was a cowinner of APSA's political psychology section's best book award. The Meaning of the Nuclear Revolution (Cornell University Press, 1989) won him the 1990 Grawemeyer Award for Ideas Improving World Order. Jervis is also the author of Perception and Misperception in International Politics (Princeton University Press, 1976), The Logic of Images in International Relations (Princeton University Press, 1970; 2nd ed., Columbia University Press, 1989), and The Illogic of American Nuclear Strategy (Cornell University Press, 1984). He has coedited eight other books and authored over 80 chapters and articles.

His APSA responsibilities have included service on the Council, as a vice president, and as a program chair for the 1987 Annual Meeting. He has been the conference chair of the annual meetings of the International Society of Political Psychology and the International Studies Association and he has received career achievement awards from the ISPP and ISA's security studies section. He serves on numerous editorial boards, is a coeditor of the Cornell Studies in Security Affairs, was a member of the National Academy of Sciences Committee on Contributions of Behavioral and Social Science to the Prevention of Nuclear War, and currently chairs the Historical Declassification Advisory Panel for the CIA. He was a Guggenheim fellow in 1978–79 and is a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. In 1995–96 he was acting associate vice president of Arts and Sciences at Columbia and in 1998–99 chaired the school's Academic Review Committee.

Treasurer (1999–2001)

James A. Stimson, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

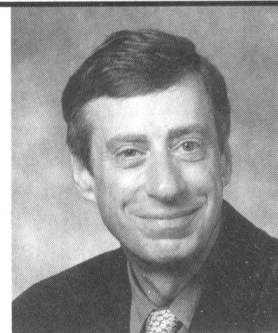

James A. Stimson is Raymond Dawson Distinguished Professor of Political Science at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. He earned his B.A. from the University of Minnesota and his Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina in 1970. He returned to Chapel Hill in 1997 after appointments to the political science faculties of SUNY-Buffalo, Florida State, and the Universities of Houston, Iowa, and Minnesota.

Stimson is a former president of the Midwest Political Science Association, former trustee of the APSA Trust and Development Board, and a current member of the APSA Council. He has authored or coauthored four books: Yeas and Nays: Normal Decision-Making in the U.S. House of Representatives (Wiley, 1975), which he cowrote with Donald R. Matthews; Issue Evolution: Race and the Reconstruction of American Politics (Princeton University Press, 1989), with Edward G. Carmines; Public Opinion in America: Moods, Cycles, and Swings, 2nd ed. (Westview, 1999); and

The Macro Polity (Cambridge University Press, forthcoming), with Robert S. Erikson and Michael B. MacKuen. A fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences during 1994–95, he has won the Heinz Eulau Award and Gladys Kammerer

Award of the American Political Science Association, the Chastain Award of the Southern Political Science Association, and the Pi Sigma Alpha Award of the Midwest Political Science Association.

Former editor of Political Analysis, he has served on the editorial boards of the American Journal of Political Science, Journal of Politics, Political Methodology, Public Opinion Quarterly, and American Politics Quarterly, and has authored articles in the major journals of political science.

Council (1999–2001)

Randall Calvert, Washington University

Randall Calvert is professor of political science at Washington University in St. Louis. He earned his B.S. from the University of Kentucky in 1975 and his Ph.D. from the California Institute of Technology in 1980. Prior to returning to Washington University in 1999, where he had been associate professor of political science until 1987, he was Don Alonzo Watson Professor of Political Science at the University of Rochester. He was department chair at Rochester from 1991 to 1996. In 1984–85 he was a postdoctoral fellow in political economy at Carnegie-Mellon University and he spent 1990–91 as a fellow of the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences.

Calvert presently chairs APSA's Organized Section on Political Economy. He served on the section's Council from 1994 to 1996 and chaired its first Best Dissertation Award Committee in 1993. He was a Program Committee member for the 1988 APSA Annual Meeting and the 1991 Midwest Political Science Association convention, and a member, in 1993, of APSA's Heinz Eulau Award Committee. He has served on the National Science Foundation's Advisory Panel for Political Science and on NSF's Graduate Fellowship Program evaluation panel. Together with Thraainn Eggertsson, Calvert edits

Cambridge University Press's The Political Economy of Institutions and Decisions series. He is also a coeditor of Economics & Politics. He serves the Journal of Politics as an editorial board member, and did the same for the American Journal of Political Science from 1980 to 1982 and 1988 to 1990.

Calvert's research focus is positive political theory and American politics. He is the author of Models of Imperfect Information in Politics (Harwood Academic, 1986) and also of several journal articles on positive theory and on American legislative and electoral politics published in the American Political Science Review, American Journal of Political Science, and Journal of Politics. In the past decade, his published research has concentrated especially on general game-theoretic models of leadership and social institutions. His current research focus is on processes of political communication and argument, and on American and comparative constitutional politics.

Council (1999–2001)

William Galston, University of Maryland, College Park

William Galston is a professor in the School of Public Affairs at the University of Maryland, College Park and director of the university's Institute for Philosophy and Public Policy. He was on leave from January 1993 through May 1995, during which time he served as President Clinton's deputy assistant for domestic policy. He has also served as executive director of the bipartisan National Commission on Civic Renewal, which is co-chaired by former senator Sam Nunn and former secretary of education William Bennett and funded with a grant from the Pew Charitable Trusts. Professor Galston is the author of five books and numerous articles on political philosophy, public policy, and American politics.

Professor Galston's prior political involvement includes service as chief speechwriter for John Anderson's National Unity campaign in 1980, as issues director for Walter Mondale's presidential campaign from 1982 to 1984, and as senior advisor to then-senator Al Gore Jr. during his 1988 campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination. Since 1989, Galston has served as a senior advisor to the Democratic Leadership Council and the Progressive Policy Institute and is now serving as a senior policy advisor to the presidential campaign of Vice President Gore.

Council (1999–2001)

Edmond Keller, University of California, Los Angeles

Emond J. Keller is professor of political science and director of the James S. Coleman African Studies Center at the University of California, Los Angeles. He specializes in comparative politics with an emphasis on Africa. Keller received his B.A. in government from Louisiana State University, New Orleans and his M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin, Madison.

He has taught at Indiana University, Dartmouth College, University of Wisconsin, Xavier University (New Orleans), and the University of California, Santa Barbara. Keller has been a visiting research scholar at various institutions. Also, he has consulted widely on issues relating to African development and public policy, and, more recently, on the process of political transitions in Africa and on African regional security issues.

Within the profession, Keller served on the Executive Committee of the comparative politics section of APSA from 1996 to 1998 and, between 1994 and 2000, he served as the Africa specialist on the editorial board of Comparative Politics. During 1995–96 he served as the chair of APSA's James Madison Award Committee. In addition, Keller has served three terms as program chair for the Division on Comparative Politics of Developing Countries for APSA's Annual Meeting, most recently in 1999. He has served on the editorial board of the Western Political Science Association and the National Journal of Political Science, as editor of the Journal of African Policy Studies, as treasurer for the North American Chapter of the African Journal of Political Science, and as vice president and president of the African Studies Association.

Keller is the author of two monographs: Education, Manpower and Development: The Impact of Educational Policy in Kenya (Kenya Literature Bureau, 1980) and Revolutionary Ethiopia: From Empire to People's Republic (Indiana University Press, 1988). He has also written more than 50 articles on African and African-American politics, and has coedited three books. Presently, Keller's main research is on issues of political transitions in Africa, cultural pluralism and nationalism, and conflict and conflict management in Africa.

Council (1999–2001)

Gary King, Harvard University

Gary King is professor of government at Harvard University, where he has taught since 1987. Between 1984 and 1987 he taught at New York University. King received his Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin in 1984 and his B.A. from the State University of New York, New Paltz in 1980. He has been a Guggenheim fellow, a visiting fellow at Nuffield College, Oxford University, and is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He has won the Gosnell Prize (1997,

1999), the Donald Campbell Award (1997), the Eulau Award (1995), the Mills Award (1993), the Pi Sigma Alpha Award (1993, 1998), APSA's Organized Section on Information Technology and Politics' Best Research Software Award (1992,

1994, 1997), the Okidata Best Research Software Award

(1999), and the Okidata Best Research Web Site Award (1999), among others. He has authored or coauthored fifty journal articles and four books in political methodology and other fields of political science, including A Solution to the Ecological Inference Problem: Reconstructing Individual Behavior from Aggregate Data (Princeton University Press, 1997); Unifying Political Methodology: The Likelihood Theory of Statistical Inference (University of Michigan Press, 1998); and, with Robert Keohane and Sidney Verba, Designing Social Inquiry: Scientific Inference in Qualitative Research (Princeton University Press, 1994). He has also authored several widely used public domain statistical software packages and data sets.

King has served on the Council of the Inter-university Consortium for Political and Social Research and as chair of ICPSR's Director Search Committee, on the Executive Council and as chair of the Publications Committee of the Midwest Political Science Association, as APSA's liaison to the American Association for the Advancement of Science, on the editorial boards of twelve scholarly journals and several NSF panels, and as president of the Society for Political Methodology. King's research has been supported by the National Science Foundation, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, World Health Organization, National Institutes of Aging, Global Forum for Health Research, and several corporations and foundations. King also serves as science advisor to the World Health Organization, and director of the Harvard-MIT Data Center. His homepage can be found at <http://gking.harvard.edu>.

Council (1999–2001)

Atul Kohli, Princeton University

Atul Kohli is professor of politics and international affairs at Princeton University. His principal research is in the area of comparative political economy with a focus on the developing countries. He is the author of India's Successful Democracy (Cambridge University Press, 2000) and The State and Poverty in India and Democracy and Discontent: India's Growing Crisis of Governability (Cambridge University Press, 1987), and the editor of The State and Development in the Third World (Princeton University Press, 1986); India's Democracy: An Analysis of Changing State-Society Relations (Princeton University Press, 1988); State Power and Social Forces: Domination and Transformation in the Third World (Cambridge University Press, 1994); and Community Conflicts and the State in India (Oxford University Press, 1988). His current research project is a comparative analysis of the politics of industrialization in South Korea, Brazil, India, and Nigeria. He is an editor of World Politics and has been the recipient of grants and fellowships from the Social Science Research Council, Ford Foundation, and Russell Sage Foundation. He received his Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley.

Council (1999–2001)

David Rayside, University of Toronto

David Rayside is professor of political science at the University of Toronto. He was raised in Montreal and received his B.A. from Carleton University in Ottawa in 1969. He went to the University of Michigan as a Woodrow Wilson Fellow and a Canada Council Doctoral Fellow and graduated with a Ph.D. in 1976. He has been a member of Toronto's political science department since 1974 and, for most of that time, has held an appointment at the University's founding college—University College—where he served as vice-principal from 1993 to 1997. He is also associated with the undergraduate program in sexual diversity studies, which he helped establish in 1998.

Rayside is the author of On the Fringe: Gays and Lesbians in Politics (Cornell University Press, 1998), as well as a number of articles on the politics of sexual diversity in Canada, Britain, and the United States. In his recent work, Rayside has explored the challenges facing social activists as they engage mainstream political processes, an important theme in his research on political clashes over recognizing same-sex relationships in Canada's two most westerly provinces and the Pacific Northwest of the United States. (Rayside has had an activist as well as a scholarly interest in sexual diversity, as well as in issues related to gender and policing.)

Rayside is also collaborating with his partner, Gerald Hunt, on an exploration of the embrace of such issues by labor movements in Europe and North America.

Rayside served on the Board of the Canadian Political Science Association from 1981 to 1983, and on CPSA committees examining gender inequity and part-time employment in the profession. He helped found the Canadian Lesbian and Gay Studies Association in 1994–95. Within APSA, he served as a member of the Committee on the Status of Lesbians and Gays in the Profession from 1995 to 1997, during which time he helped draft the Committee's report to the Association.

Christine Marie Sierra, University of New Mexico

Christine Marie Sierra is associate professor of political science at the University of New Mexico. She received her B.A., with honors, from the University of Texas. Her M.A. and Ph.D. are from Stanford University.

Sierra teaches and researches in the areas of American race and ethnic politics, Latino/a politics, and women in American politics. Her publications include two coedited books: Chicana Voices: Intersections of Class, Race, and Gender (University of New Mexico Press, 3rd printing, 1993) and Chicana Critical Issues (Third Woman Press, 1993). Her other publications focus on Mexican American's political activism on immigration policy, Hispanic politics in New Mexico, and the politics of Chicana and Latina women in the United States. She has cowritten and produced a feature-length documentary titled This Town Is Not for Sale! The 1994 Santa Fe Mayoral Election, which premiered on PBS television stations in 1999.

As an expert in Latino/a politics, she has served as a consultant to Williams College and the University of Notre Dame on the establishment of a Latino studies programs. She was a presidential appointee to the Good Neighbor Environmental Board, which advises the president and members of Congress on environmental and infrastructure needs of the U.S.-Mexico border region.

Sierra has held a postdoctoral fellowship from the Ford Foundation and has been a guest scholar at The Brookings Institution in Washington, DC.

Her activities in the profession include membership on the editorial board of PS (1999–2001), the Committee on the Status of Latinos in the Profession (1996–98), and the Women's Caucus in Political Science's Chilly Climate and minority liaison committees. She also served on the selection committee for the Ralph Bunche Award for the best book on cultural pluralism (1996). She is currently co-president (with James Jennings) of APSA's Organized Section on Race, Ethnicity, and Politics (1999–2000).

Sven Steinmo, University of Colorado, Boulder

Sven Steinmo is associate professor of political science at the University of Colorado, Boulder. He received his M.A. and Ph.D. in political science from the University of California, Berkeley. He also received a M.P.H. from Berkeley in 1982. Steinmo served as director of the International Affairs Program at the University of Colorado from 1992 to 1995. He also directed the Conference on World Affairs there from 1995 to 1998. He is currently a member of the Steering Committee for the Council for European Studies and a member of "Team Europe" for the EU Delegation in the United States. In past years, he has served on the Nominating Committee of APSA's politics and history section and on the selection committee for the political economy section's Best Book Award. He is currently a member of APSA's Council and its Strategic Planning Committee.

Steinmo has received numerous awards for his writing, including the Fulbright Hays Dissertation Scholarship (1983–84), ACLS/SSRC Dissertation Research Fellowship (1984–85), APSA Gabriel Almond Award for the best dissertation in comparative politics (1989), and APSA's Organized Section on Political Economy's Best Book Award (1994). He has also won several teaching awards at the University of Colorado.

Steinmo's research, writing, and teaching range broadly in the fields of political economy, comparative politics and policy, and American government. His books include Structuring Politics: Historical Institutionalism in Comparative Analysis (Cambridge University Press, 1992), which he coedited with Kathleen Thelen and Frank Longstreth; Taxation and Democracy: Swedish, British, and American Approaches to Financing the Modern State (Yale University Press, 1993); and Tax Policy (Edward Elgar, 1998). He is currently working on two books tentatively titled In the Land of Milk and Honey: A Short History of America and the People it Created and, with Daune Swank, The New Political Economy of Taxation.

LAST CALL! DON'T BE LEFT OUT!

---

Time is running out to participate in APSA's upcoming Centennial Biographical Directory of Members.

---

- ◆ Data is being collected online at <http://search.apsanet.org/> ◆
- ◆ After June 30, 2000 no more changes will be accepted ◆
- ◆ Only members whose memberships are current as of June 30, 2000 will be included in the directory ◆

For the first time in over a decade, APSA is publishing a Biographical Directory of Members. In addition to the usual contact, degree, and fields of specialization information, this extensive directory will also list members' publications, professional honors, and current/previous professional and administrative positions. The Centennial Biographical Directory will also feature extensive indices and members' comments on significant changes in political science, the value of political science training, and the future of the discipline, as well as historical data on the Association and the profession.

If your membership has lapsed, fill out our online form available at <http://www.apsanet.org/>, call the national office at 202.483.2512 and request the membership department, or use the form contained in this issue of PS in order to renew.

Pre-publication orders for the paper version, the CD-ROM edition, or both will continue to be accepted until the directory comes out in the winter of 2000-2001.