EAST ASIA

Tradition and Transformation

John K. Fairbank, Edwin O. Reischauer and
Albert M. Craig

This is a new book. It is not a condensation of East Asia: The Modern Transformation and East Asia: The Great Tradition. It is little more than half the length of these two titles and therefore it is less detailed, but it is now more up-to-date and more compact. Like its two predecessors it is principally an exposition of the distinctive institutions and the predominant intellectual and aesthetic achievement of a third of mankind in China, Japan, Korea and Vietnam. The history of these peoples is largely seen from their own viewpoint. The illustrations are quite new and many are in full colour.

The Origins of the Cultural Revolution

I: Contradictions Among the People 1956-7

Roderick MacFarquhar

In the course of the strange events of the cultural revolution it became clear that Chairman Mao himself was the progenitor of the movement. The three volumes of this study will seek to explain Mao's apparently inexplicable behaviour by showing how a combination of political, economic, social, and international developments, as well as cultural ones, led him to make his fateful decision. £5.50 Royal Institute of International Affairs

Agricultural Colonization in India since Independence

B. H. Farmer

This is a comprehensive study of government-organized projects to establish people on wasteland in groups large enough to require entirely new settlements. It sets post-independence colonization in its historical and geographical context, and explores a number of relevant themes. £7.50 Royal Institute of International Affairs

The Moral and Political Thought of Mahatma Gandhi

Raghavan Iyer

The chief aim of this work is to elucidate the central concepts of Gandhi's thought, with special attention to the connection between his presuppositions and his precepts.
