Introduction to This Supplement

It is my pleasure to write an introduction to this supplement. It is the first to appear under my editorship. We are very grateful to Drs. Radebaugh, Buckholtz, and Khachaturian for acting as guest editors.

International Psychogeriatrics is essentially a forum for original scientific papers. We encourage the submission of original papers from our International Psychogeriatric Association members, and indeed others in our field. We also publish special supplements on various topics. The supplement articles may be the choice of the guest editors, with invited authors, or the edited proceedings of a conference.

In this supplement we are publishing the proceedings of a meeting chaired by our distinguished guest editors Drs. Radebaugh, Buckholtz, and Khachaturian. The topic is the vitally important question of behavioral approaches to the treatment of Alzheimer's disease, which is of continuing research interest to those dealing with the clinical problems of older people.

We believe that our readership will appreciate this publication, and our editorial office would be grateful for any feedback.
